CITY PAVING PROBE URGED; KERR NAMES FOOD AUDITORS

Today

Mr. and Mrs. Amos and Andy.
Fear Worse Than Death.
30 Million More Hindus.
Study Russia? Good Idea.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

IN THE ADVANCE Century, coming from Chicago on Sunday, two cheerful young married couples introduced themselves as Mr. and Mrs. Charles Correll, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Gosden. You will be interested to learn that the radio names of the two husbands are Amos and Andy.

Mr. Gosden is Amos, Mr. Correll is Andy. They are able young men, and their wives, one tall and dark, the other shorter with light eyes, are unusually intelligent, and doubtless responsible for a large part of their husbands' success.

THE YOUNG men, wisely, rehearse but little, to avoid loss of spontaniety.

You learned from them last evening how Amos trailed a lady from the courtroom and obtained valuable information for his friend Andy.

The young men were advised to read the classics of wit, Don Quixote, Moliere's comedies, and every line that Shakespeare wrote about Falstaff, except "The Merry Wives of Windsor," a pot-boiler, written to please Queen Elizabeth.

The two remarkable young geniuses, extremely modest, have not the slightest conception of their own achievements.

TO MANY fear of death is worse than death. Henry Sammartino gambled on a steamship, lost $1,300 in cash, then gave $2,800 in checks and stopped payment on the checks. Detectives say the criminals that robbed him threatened his life, savagely, and fear drove him to suicide.

Death is soon over, fear is dreadful and prolonged agony. One man killed himself fearing to fight a duel, next morning. Another blew his brains out, afraid to follow his companion to safety over a narrow log across a deep chasm.

BUT AS STRANGE as fear of death is the courage displayed by some men. An old Jew submitted to torture repeatedly over a period of months, refused to deny his religion, and died unconquered.

A Frenchman holding the enemy's boat to the shore had both hands cut off. He put his elbows over the side of the boat and hung on while they slashed his head.

And Crillon, greatest fighter of them all, when laid out in death, was found to have wounds on every inch of his body in front, not a scar on his back. Of him it could be said "he never feared the face of any man."

IN THE LAST 10 years, India's population has increased 30 millions, another serious responsibility at the door of Great Britain. Since the British took control of India, its population has more than trebled, going from a hundred millions to about 340 millions.

Those that dread the results of birth control may be pleased to hear that population in Madras has increased 22 per cent, in spite of an active birth control society.

INDIA'S INCREASE is due to the British, preventing famines, checking plagues with sanitary measures, in spite of protests by natives, who thought the gods could be appeased by cutting the throats of goats and spilling the blood on the ground.

Britain has also increased Hindu population by preventing marriage of little girls to full-grown men, which does not lead to healthy families, and by improving the water supply.

IF BENEVOLENT agencies, like the British empire in India, and the Rockefeller Foundation in China, should succeed in adding a billion or two to the population of Asia, that might change the history of the world.

However, "Providence arranges it so that the trees do not go into the heavens." Providence has, doubtless, arranged population. If India becomes big enough, the British will be driven out, and then, according to their promise, the Afghans will come down, "kill half the Hindus, and make the rest slaves."

SHERIDAN'S 20-mile ride was a fine performance; so was Paul Revere's, although some say it never happened quite that way. The gentleman who carried the news from "Ghent to Aix" was invented by the poet, and the Greek runner who dropped dead as he told of the great disaster is legendary.

But there is nothing uncertain about Joe Crosson's flight from Fairbanks to Point Barrow in Alaska over mountains swept by raging storms.

He carried no news of battle, but took 250,000 units of diphtheria anti-toxin to the Presbyterian Mission Hospital on Point Barrow to save lives threatened by a diphtheria plague.

That ride over mountains, through clouds and the storm, will compare with any in history. The American Airways Corporation is to be congratulated on supplying the plane

MR. STIMSON, secretary of state, will assign an assistant to study Russia for the State Department. But it is announced that the State Department has not changed its mind about Russia, which sounds like the late dowager empress of China, issuing the order: "Execute this person, and give him a careful trial afterward."

A COUNTRY as great and as intelligent as the United States is supposed to be, ought to be informed concerning another country as great as Russia. And

COUNTESS AIDS CHAPLIN QUEST

By WILLIAM HILLMAN
Universal Service.

Guided by the 20-year-old countess, Hollywood's premier comedian slipped out of a side door of the Hotel Adlon, while the iron gates of the front entrance were swung to, stemming the rush of the thousands who clamored for admittance.

With the pursuers eluded, the Countess and Charlie visited a theater and from there went to a tenderloin beer cellar, where Charlie emptied several schooners. Safe in his hotel again he said:

"It was fascinating and what a relief to slip away from the crowd."

Marlene Dietrich had attempted to approach the comedian at the station, but a pair of policemen seized her and lifted the German film beauty to a platform, from where she bitterly berated them for their rudeness. Marlene succeeded in battling her way into the hotel, however. She pushed her way into Charlie's room to be photographed beside Berlin's idol.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 10.—(AP.)—Nancy Bowen, 65-year-old Seneca Indian woman, today pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of manslaughter in connection with the slaying of Mrs. Clotilde Marchand in her Buffalo home a year ago.

Nancy originally was indicted, together with Lila Jimerson, Cayuga Indian woman, who was acquitted a week ago, on a charge of murder.

Large crowds are expected to gather at the slide in Rose Grove, North Park, and near Wilson school in South Park tonight and continue until warmer weather melts the snow.

GIRLS WILT IN DRAMATIC GIN TRIAL

Two Sisters of Dead Arlene And Kirkland's Mother Overcome; Case Near Jury

International News Service.

VALPARAISO, Ind., March 10.—Attorneys for the defense and prosecution fought their final bitter battle of words today before the rural jury which will pass judgment on Virgil Kirkland, 20, former high school athlete, accused of attacking and murdering his sweetheart, Arlene Draves, at a Gary gin party November 30.

The case was to be in the hands of the jury before nightfall.

Caroline Draves, sister of the dead girl, collapsed and had to be carried from Judge Grant Crumpacker's courtroom by her brother Edward, when Assistant Prosecutor Edmund Freund cited the alleged cruelty of the defense in disinterring Arlene's body for a new post mortem. Another sister, Elsie, fell into the arms of a woman friend.

Defense Attorney Ronald Oldham charged that Arlene was not a "young unsophisticate," and mentioned Kirkland's remark to the effect that it was not necessary for him to use force on the girl.

Feminine spectators broke into sobs. The 20-year-old defendant was stoical as an Indian.

MRS. KIRKLAND SHAKEN

Freund faced Kirkland as he propounded his vitriolic attack, following up the argument of Prosecutor John Underwood, who asserted the defendant had committed a "fiendish crime" and should be given the maximum penalty.

115-Year-Old Man Battles for Life

FRANKLIN, Md., March 10.—(AP.)—The spark of life still burned feebly today in the breast of Burbridge Coleman Trenum, whose family Bible records his age as 115 years.

Trenum was reported dead last night, but today relatives said he still was living, although his condition was "very low." He fell a victim of bronchitis. He has been active and able to walk without support in spite of his age.

Hunt for Dynamite Scattered by Boys

ST. PAUL, March 10.—(INS.)—Squads of police and erstwhile youthful pranksters today combed the district around St. Catherine's College for nearly 100 sticks of dynamite which the boys admitted they had "scattered all over the neighborhood." The boys had hurled the sticks at walls and trees, rattled them along picket-fences and tossed them around carelessly without so much as a single successful boom.

Answers Ambulance Call, Finds Own Children Hurt

Responding to an accident call, Wagonman Herbert W. Reinheimer, of Carrick Police Station, early last night found his two children, Charlotte, 4, and Jean, 8, the victims of a coasting accident in Birmingham avenue, South Side. The children had been coasting with George Hodgon, 8, when they ran into an automobile driven, police say, by Arthur P. Munio, 40, of 410 Loughlin avenue. All reside at 341 Birmingham avenue.

Charlotte, suffering from a severe head injury and believed to have been seriously injured, was taken to South Side Hospital for observation. The other two were treated at home. Munio was arrested.

Pinchot Fights Modification of Sabbath Laws

HARRISBURG, March 10.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today voiced his opposition to any change of the Sunday observance laws. He made this declaration here today before a rally of Sunday observance followers in the Penn-Harris Hotel. The rally was staged by the "Friends of the Proper Observance of the Sabbath."

The public hearing on the blue law situation will be held March 17 in the House of Representatives.

PINCHOT BACKS LAW

The Governor declared:

"I believe in Sunday observance, and my position was plainly defined during the campaign, that I am in favor of the law as it stands.

"The Sunday observance question is a branch of that most important problem of establishing and of maintaining standards for the individual and for the commonwealth. A man is measured first of all by

COAL POLICE BILL AIRED

HARRISBURG, March 10.—The forces for and against Michael A. Musmanno's coal and iron police bill, meeting at a public hearing here today, fired their broadsides in praise and condemnation.

The bill would grant private police powers to those of property watchmen.

Musmanno today assailed the other coal and iron police bill sponsored by the administration as "shocking" and one to permit "cossackism." It was introduced in the House last night.

FATHER COX ATTENDS

The Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's Church, Pittsburgh, upheld the Musmanno measure at today's hearing, although he said he favored no police at all other than police for

EVANS CITES $1,100,000 'EXTRAS'

Former Controller Charges Waste, Declares Kline Ignored Complaints in '29

Accusations of mismanagement in the city government today were hurled at another department.

Henry Oliver Evans, former city controller, has asked City Council to investigate paving contracts awarded through the Department of Public Works. He asks a public hearing of his charges.

Evans, who started the action which is bringing back to the city approximately $500,000 out of the garbage contracts, says he asked Mayor Charles H. Kline to investigate the Department of Public Works in the summer of 1929. The Mayor never replied.

$1,100,000 INVOLVED

In three years, ending with 1928, paving improvements cost the city $1,100,000 more than the sum called for in the original estimates of city engineers, Mr. Evans declared. This difference was entirely due to increased quantities of materials used, and not to "extras," Mr. Evans said.

The communication to the Mayor was accompanied with three examples of street paving, showing greatly increased quantities in the final estimates. The detailed report of an engineer was enclosed.

While no response on the communication was received from the Mayor, Mr. Evans declared a letter came from the city engineer, in which the latter claimed that the excesses were to be expected and were good practice.

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang said he does not care to enter into controversy with Mr. Evans. Overrunning of final estimates on paving contracts may be expected on any engineering job.

He said:

"I have no apology to make for this department. We will stand on our records. There is no engineering contract let in the country which will not show overrunning on some of the items. No engineer is capable of forecasting exactly what effect topography and other uncertain features will have on the size of the job."

METHODS ASSAILED

The same "system" of contracting is still in force, Mr. Evans says he believes. He says that the

Raskob's Bright Idea Already Is Being Amended

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The Raskob plan for state option is so good they are already writing amendments to it.

Raskob doesn't want F. Scott McBride to bend the knee in surrender. All he wants him to do is bend the elbow.

Dr. Nippers says:

COUNCILMAN W. Y. ENGLISH RECITING THE SCRIPTURES

FIND WAR NURSE INJURED

LYNN, Mass., March 10.—(INS.)—Complete mystery this afternoon surrounded the finding earlier in the day of Mrs. Evelyn M. Little, 35, attractive wife of Herbert M. Little, general manager of a Peabody leather company, on the floor of the living room of her apartment resembling a hammer blow on the back of the head, and moaning:

"One, two, three, four."

She was dressed in an evening gown. The door was locked from the inside. Chairs and tables were overturned and a deck of playing cards lay scattered about the floor.

Mrs. Little, daughter of the late Rev. M. A. Moor, bishop of Lincolnshire, England, was a nurse during the World War. She met Little, the na member of the Royal Flying Corps, in France. She was wounded during an air raid on London. They separated two years ago.

The fact that money and jewels in her apartment were untouched, that the apartment doors were locked on the inside and that Police Inspector James Murphy, of Peabody, revealed he had been working on a report made by Mrs. Little that a man and a girl were attempting to steal souvenirs she had brought from the trenches, furnished puzzling angles to the case.

He had been active in school athletics two years. A few days after he was injured doctors at the hospital decided upon a blood transfusion, and called for volunteers. Every member of the basketball team volunteered, but doctors decided not to resort to the operation.

Eaker on Trans-U. S. Hop, Hawks in Mystery Plane

LONG BEACH MUNICIPAL AIRPORT, Cal., March 10.—(AP.)—Capt. Ira Eaker, noted Army pilot, hopped off here at 2:13 a. m. (5:13 a. m. Pittsburgh time) today for the Atlantic coast on a non-stop flight to test his Army transport airplane. He said emphatically he would not attempt to better the transcontinental flight record.

Eaker said:

"I am carrying 486 gallons of gasoline, and I am going to fly just as far as that will take me. Maybe I will get to Dayton, O., or I might get as far as Washington. There is an extremely slight possibility that I might get as far as New York."

His main object will be to check the speed of the plane over a long distance. Eaker was a member of the crew of the Army plane Question Mark when that ship established a world refueling endurance flight record.

NEW YORK, March 10.—(AP.)—In the face of a stiff headwind, Capt. Frank M. Hawks, speed flier, pointed his "mystery" plane toward Houston, Tex., early today in anticipation of a farewell visit among the home folks before he sails for Europe. He took off at 7:16—several hours later than he planned—and set Atlanta, Ga., as his first hop. He hoped to be in Houston before dark. He and his plane will board the liner Europa on March 31 in preparation for a few flights about the continent.

PLANS DRAWN FOR SUCCOP QUIZ

Price, Waterhouse Chosen; Head of Women's League Scores Council 'Dodging'

With the request of the League of Women Voters for a public investigation of the Department of Supplies filed away by City Council amid an outpouring of scriptural verses and debate, members of the league and the Citizens' Committee are centering their attention on the double audit which will be started tomorrow with the co-operation of Controller James P. Kerr.

The league reported today that a satisfactory response had been made to the association's general appeal to its membership for additional funds to carry on its fight for an investigation of the Supplies Department.

Controller Kerr announced today that the official audit would be made by Price, Waterhouse & Co. After he had announced the identity of the accountants the Controller conferred with Mrs. J. O. Miller and Mrs. Frank A. Bond, of the League of Women Voters; Lester M. Johnston, of the Citizens' Committee, and A. L. Jacobs and M. C. Conick, of Main & Co., which will make the independent audit.

CO-OPERATION PLEDGED

Mrs. Miller said Kerr had assured co-operation. Kerr said:

"The Controller and the Mayor are most anxious to have a complete audit, showing in every detail all transactions of the Department of Supplies.

Leslie M. Johnston, chairman of the Citizens' Committee, which met last night with the committee of the League and accountants of Main & Co., said the audit had been postponed for one day at the controller's request. Johnston said:

"It will be much better for both auditing groups to start at the same time. We are interested chiefly in getting this audit started. We are not saying what will be done afterwards."

While the accountants were preparing to examine the records of Bertram L. Succop, the discharged director of supplies, his successor,

UTILITIES QUIZ URGES PUBLIC COUNSEL FOR RATE CASES

EXTENSION OF PROBE ASKED

Proposal Includes Financing Of Complaints: Earnest Hits 'Whitewash' Charge

HARRISBURG, March 10.—(AP.) — Recommendations for various changes in the public service law and an extension of time for the Senate investigation of the Public Service Commission was asked today in a report submitted by the committee conducting the inquiry.

The recommendations included passage of legislation providing for a people's counsel with provision for financing the public in their complaints suspension of the rate increases for a period not exceeding six months pending a hearing and determination by the commission and provision for approval by the securities commission or the Public Service Commission of the issuance of all securities by public utilities.

EXTENSION SOUGHT

The extension of time recommended was until April 14.

The committee also recommended that the personnel of the Public Service Commission bureaus of accounts and engineering be increased.

Bills presented last night by Senator McClure, Delaware, and today by Senator Rial, Westmoreland, take care of the committee's first recommendation and a previous measure meets the second recommendation. The Senate votes the extension of time unanimously.

Senator Earnest, Dauphin chairman of the Senate's investigating committee, recommended the report to the Senate.

He said it was the duty of the Legislature to find out whether the public law service is sufficient and fairly administered. He said:

"I have heard so much about whitewashing lately.

"When I was a boy, I always found that in the spring of the year whitewashing and house-cleaning were so intimately connected that they were a part of one and the same thing."

ASSAILS "THREAT"

The senator said that it was perhaps unfortunate that the Wyoming Valley water rate cases are under discussion while a court proceeding is pending. He continued:

"It might be gravely considered whether democracy in action and a threat not to pay rates even though the military arm of the government should be evoked is a proper way to conduct a legislative investigation.

"The orderly processes of government must be preserved.

"There ought to be legal remedies for alleged wrongs and those legal remedies should be pursued to the very end of patience. I must add that I believe that a court or a commission should never be swerved from its duty by public clamor, private interest or political consequences, and if any of these moved the Public Service Commsision in the Wyoming Valley water cases they should be delved into the very bottom and proper redress made. Hysteria, inuendo and propaganda will not suffice. Fairness and reasonable proof should come forward willingly, openly and frankly.

"I think this investigation by the Senate committee, hampered as it has been by lack of funds and, if not opposition, at least little cordial support, from the administration, has served to date a useful purpose. Perhaps the investigation by the House with the start made in the Senate will prove of more use than than the investigation we have on hand. Doubtless, that investigation will be of some avail in the determination of the matters before the Legislature.

"What is true of a man is true of a community, a state, or a nation. Unless it has standards, and unless it is willing to live by those standards, it is good for nothing but to be trodden under foot of man.

"As I have gone about the world during the four years between governorships, I have constantly been asked this question: 'What is the matter with Pennsylvania?'

ASSAILS CORRUPTION

"The question never refers to our economic situation, to our resources, our educational system, to anything but just one thing: and that is to the corruption in politics brought about by political machines, and notably about the Philadelphia gang.

"Why does it happen? The lack of standards is the answer. The people of Pennsylvania, and the people of Philadelphia in particular, have been trained by successive generations of gang leaders to accept with little or no objection standards in public life which the great mass of the citizens would indignantly denounce and reject if the same standards were applied to their private lives.

"That is one of the reasons why the matter of Sunday observance is given such great weight by so many people throughout Pennsylvania. They regard it as a standard from which it would be dangerous for the state to fall away."

Gen. Edward Martin, state treasurer and Republican state chairman, also spoke in opposition to any change in the Sunday laws.

COAL POLICE BILL AIRED

the protection of all. Father Cox asserted:

"The coal and iron police system seems to have much of the quality of special privilege. The companies want private police, but what would they say if the workmen asked for private police?

"If there are abuses on both sides, a common protector is the fundamental law of our land, and should be continued so."

Patrick Fagan, head of the United Mine Workers, District No. 5, also spoke in favor of the bill. He offered affidavits showing more than 100 coal and iron police brutalities in Western Pennsylvania.

Rabbi Philip David Bookstaber, representing the State Civil Liberties Union, said that he and those he represented believe and recommend that the proper solution of the coal and iron police problem demands complete and permanent abolition by the passage of the Musmanno bill.

Musmanno in his statement said:

"With all the respect that I have for Gov. Pinchot's ability and integrity, and with all the unstinted admiration that I have for him personally, I am reluctantly forced to say that his coal and iron police bill introduced last night can only be described as shocking. It establishes a system infinitely worse than the original coal and iron police, under whose reign of terror John Barcoski was murdered and countless hundreds of other innocent persons were cruelly victimized."

PROGRESSIVES TO ORGANIZE FOR FIGHT

Conference to Lay Plans For Struggle to Enact Liberal Legislation

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 10.—A permanent organization to battle for enactment of liberal legislation in Congress will be formed at the national conference of Progressives, meeting here tomorrow and Thursday, it was announced today by its managers.

The group of Senate insurgents—Republican and Democrat—who sponsored the conference, were enthusiastic over the prospects when 122 nationally-prominent educators, economists, publicists, labor and farm leaders accepted their invitations.

NATIONAL ORGANIZATION

The conference, they said, would be devoted to obtaining a cross-section of the national viewpoint toward Progressive policies, and to lay the foundation for a national organization for enacting liberal legislation.

A preliminary list of progressives of both parties, who accepted invitations to the conference, failed to include the names of either Franklin D. Roosevelt, governor of New York, or Gifford Pinchot, governor of Pennsylvania.

It was said Roosevelt declined on the ground he could not spare the time. Pinchot was reported to have indicated he would attend at least one session of the conference.

TO INDORSE POLICIES

The names of 55 persons were issued by the conference managers with a statement this represented but half the expected attendance.

It was made clear by the Senate insurgents the conference was expected to indorse a program of progressive policies before adjournment, although specific legislation may not be indorsed.

Their purpose, according to Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, conference chairman, will be to get advice "from the experts, which will help us formulate legislation in the future."

Norris said special committees of experts and legislators probably would be organized to "catch further information and draft legislative proposals." This was but a tentative plan, he said, subject to revision by the conference.

VETERANS, ACCORDING to Gen. Hines, administrator of verterans' affairs, will probably borrow $900,000,000 from the government, in accordance with their RIGHT to do so, bebetween now and September.

A great part of the $900,000,000 will be devoted to paying off debts, including various installment purchases, and this ought to help prosperity.

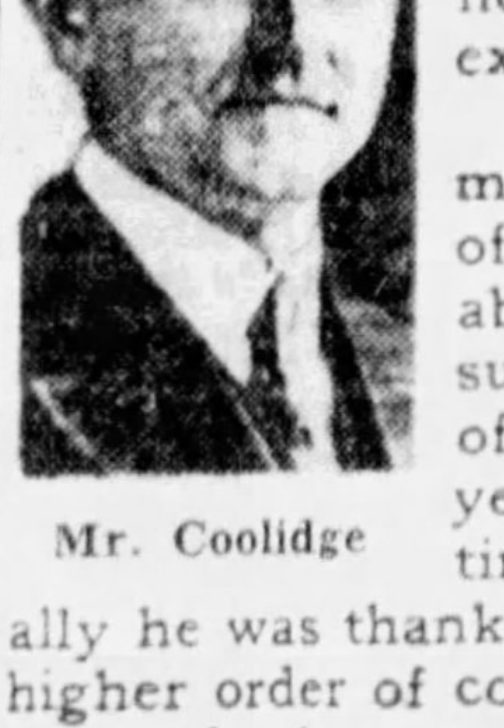
NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 10.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The retirement of Chairman Legge of the Farm Board brings to mind the enormous amount of service often accompanied with large personal expense which the federal government receives without giving full compensation. In both houses of the Congress, the courts, the cabinet, the diplomatic service and the executive boards are hundreds of men giving their time and spending their money from a sense of public duty. They are great business men, bankers, professional men and experts in many fields.



Mr. Coolidge

This is not the largest contribution they make. An even greater sacrifice is required of them in the public misrepresentation and abuse to which they often find themselves subjected as soon as they are proposed for office. We can understand the dollar a year man who served in time of war. Sometimes he was an object of attack, but usually he was thanked. These peace-time men show an even higher order of courage and patriotism. They are entitled to everlasting gratitude for the public service they perform. No one can contemplate them without realizing the reserve strength of our nation. So long as this great reservoir of public service remains we can thankfully believe that the foundations of this republic are secure.

DEATH ASKED FOR HIM

VIRGIL KIRKLAND . . . "HE GRIPPED THE CHAIR TIGHTLY"

Virgil, 20, whose life for the death of pretty Arlene Draves, 18, the prosecutor demands at Valpariso, Ind. When the electric chair was mentioned in court, Virgil whitened, gripped his chair tightly.

GIN DEATH CASE NEARS JURY

serted that "even a wolf wouldn't be so low as to invite others to attack a helpless girl."

DESCRIBES PARTY

Oldham, law partner of Barratt O'Hara, chief defense counsel, who was to close for Kirkland, followed Freund in addressing the jury. He said:

"Let's go to the scene of this party. A boy and a girl in love with each other. Love flourishes, you know, gentlemen, in spite of this age of gin and jazz.

"So then what happened? They drink. Why, I am from Kentucky, but I could not drink raw alcohol and swell wine like those children and still keep my senses.

"Yet they drank such concoctions. Then they fell into each other's arms on a divan in full view of everyone at that party. If Virgil Kirkland intended to attack that girl he wouldn't have been seen by all their friends in the attitude of love, would he?"

One juror nodded in assent. The jury as a whole gave Oldham the strictest attention. Kirkland was stony. His mother had recovered from an earlier breakdown, but her eyes were red and her lips trembled when she whispered to her husband.

"I LOVE YOU!"

"Now what happened next? This couple leave the divan and go out on the porch. She sits down, and Virgil sits down on the arm of her chair, as lovers will.

"Dick Sturtridge and his wife are out there. Mrs. Sturtridge is ill. She, too, had been drinking that vile prohibition alcohol. But her husband was sober. He was out taking care of his wife. He heard Virgil making love to Arlene.

"He quoted him as saying: 'I love you! I love you! You know I love you, babe.'

"He quoted Arlene as saying, ill from booze: 'I want to go home.'

"And then what? Sturtridge heard a thud—just one thud, gentlemen. He turned. He saw Arlene on the porch. He picked her up. Kirkland said: 'Give her to me, Dick, she's drunk.'

"FINDS ARLENE DEAD"

"Sturtridge heard no blow struck. If Virgil had hit that girl, as the state would have you believe he did, it would have been heard by him. But there was no blow heard.

"Then what happened? Virgil said: 'Are you hurt, Babe?' She said: 'I'm all right.'

"So he took her out to the car to keep her in the air. And then he went back into the house, as he admits, and started drinking again. He got drunk. He passed out. He doesn't know what happened until he woke in a car and Arlene's head was on his shoulder.

"Said Virgil: 'What time is it? Where are we? I've got to get Babe home.' But Babe was dead. It was too late. Drink and drinkcrazed youth had taken their toll."

DRYS PREDICT SHOWDOWN

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 10.—(INS.)—Faced by the prediction that prohibition laws will either succeed or be repealed within the next five years, the Anti-Saloon League of America began its third day of convention sessions here today.

Success or failure of prohibition lies in the hands of young people now approaching voting age, the convention was told by Col. F. B. Ebbert, Los Angeles, and the crisis of the battle will be reached within the next five years. He said:

"We may as well face the issue. Young people everywhere are inclined to scoff at the prohibition law. Upon the success of our efforts to present them a true picture of the saloon days rests the success of prohibition."

3 Jobless Sisters Leap to Their Death

BUDAPEST, Hungary, March 10.—(AP.)—Three sisters, without funds and unable to get work, drank poison and then plunged from the Margarethan Bridge here today, drowning in the Danube.

Frieda, Elizabeth and Irene Rosenberg came here from the Resianopel several days ago looking for jobs. This morning they climbed together to the bridge railing, screamed and jumped together.

Bowmen Rout Rebel Burmese Warriors

RANGOON, Burma, March 10.—(AP.)—Armed with bows and arrows and a few double-barreled guns, a few volunteers—most of them Christians—today successfully defended the village of Minhla, in the Tharawaddy district, from an attack by Burmese rebels. A number of the attackers were slain and others were made prisoner. The villagers suffered no casualties.

Court Overrules W. Va. Rate Board

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 10.—(AP)—The State Supreme Court today set aside the decision of the Public Service Commission fixing new rates for the United Fuel Gas Company, operating in Southern West Virginia, and sent the case back to the commission for further action.

Brewsters, Once Wealthy, Now Living in Cottage

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—(AP.)—George V. Brewster, former magazine publisher, who said his wealth once was rated at $3,000,000, is hoping a stroke of good fortune will save his few remaining thousands.

Brewster and his third wife, Corliss Palmer, film actress of a few years ago, are living—contentedly, they said—in a three-room cottage in the rear of a larger house in Hollywood which they own and rent. The cottage is furnished with paintings and other objects of art collected from all parts of the world.

Brewster said:

"Everything I have is mortgaged and I will lose all if I do not raise some money soon. I venture to say if I could sell everything for what I paid for it and pay off my debts I would be worth $50,000. I used to be rated at $3,000,000."

Brewster was found in his modest home by reporters, who sought to question him about his marriage to Miss Palmer. He said they were married at Ensenada, Mexico, in 1926, after he had obtained a Mexican divorce from his second wife, but that since some courts in this country had declined to recognize Mexican marriages, they would go through another ceremony here within a few days. He said:

"We will get married all over again in order that Corliss' interest in my estate will not be jeopardized."

Mrs. Brewster said:

"I love Bruce just as much as ever."

POLL SHOWS CONGRESS ANTI-DRY

But—Members Admit They Would Not Vote That Way, Cosmopolitan Quiz Finds

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Thirty and one-half per cent of the Seventy-second Congress favors continuation of the present prohibition law; 35 per cent is for modification of the Volstead Act, and 34½ per cent would repeal the Eighteenth Amendment.

This is the conclusion drawn by Cosmopolitan Magazine as the result of a confidential poll of 200 of the 531 men and women who will consitute the new Congress when it convenes next December.

On the basis of heart-to-heart discussions in which members revealed their real sentiments with respect to prohibition, as contrasted with their political positions on this subject, 42 senators and 158 representatives were divided in their actual convictions as follows:

Sixty-one for continuation of the present law, 70 for modification and 69 for repeal.

BUT—NO HOPE IN VOTE

This ratio, if reflected by the entire membership, would show 162 for the present law, 186 for modification and 183 for repeal.

Consolidating the opposition to the present prohibition status, the division would be 369 to 162 for a change.

The magazine says, however, that if the question of modification or repeal is brought to a vote at the next session, pressure from their constituencies and fear of reprisals by the Anti-Saloon League and other dry organizations will intimidate sufficient senators and representatives to result in probable defeat for modification legislation.

FAVOR HOOVER AGAIN

That a change is taking place in the attitude of Congress toward strict adherence to the present prohibition status is indicated by the fact that heretofore 157 of the members polled have been politically dry and but 43 openly wet, the magazine declares.

In addition to the prohibition census, the poll also registered congressional opinion as to the 1932 presidential contest. Presenting their belief—but not their personal choice—as to the Republican standard bearer, the poll gave Herbert Hoover, 101; Dwight W. Morrow, 78; Calvin Coolidge, 18; Gifford Pinchot, 3.

Predictions for the Democratic ticket were: Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, 59; Gov. Albert Ritchie, 37; Owen D. Young, 27; James A. Reed, 21; Robert J. Bulkley, 20; Newton D. Baker, 18; Alfred E. Smith, 18; Joseph T. Robinson, 8.

Should Hoover run as a dry against a Protestant Democratic anti-prohibitionist, the result forecast would be Hoover's defeat by 271 against 260 electoral votes. Should the ticket again be Hoover against Smith, Republican victory by 283 to 248 is indicated.

George Leroy Irwin when their bodies arrive here tomorrow on the Army transport St. Mihiel from Panama. Troops from Fort Hamilton, N. Y., will line the pier as the bodies are removed.

Ann Harding in Parsons Radio Chat Tomorrow

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—The thousands of admirers of Ann Harding who have been delighted with her work in "East Lynn" and "Holiday," are going to have a chance to hear her on the air tomorrow at 8:30 p. m., Pittsburgh time, over the Columbia Broadcasting System on the Sunkist program.

Miss Harding will have a number of interesting things to tell when she is interviewed by Lourella O. Parsons, motion picture editor of the Hearst newspapers and Universal Service. Neither Miss Harding nor Miss Parsons was willing to tell the subject of their interview, preferring to surprise the listeners who will be tuning in from all parts of the United States.

It is estimated Ann Harding has achieved the greatest success of any stage star who has come to Hollywood within the last two years and although she, as well as many of the other film stars, has been offered large sums to talk over the radio, this is really her first appearance before the microphone. Like Mary Pickard, she is making her debut because of her friendship for Miss Parsons.

They are scheduled to return to the capitol Saturday.

Warrant to Be Issued for Arrest of Man Held Best 'Customer' of Olive Day

Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—Arrest of a millionaire showman who is known throughout the country and who is said to have been a "buyer" of youth at Hollywood's "girl bazar" was scheduled by the District Attorney's office today as the next startling step in the investigation of Olive Clark Day's establishment.

Named by Miss Day in her amazing confession, the millionaire's asserted 16-year-old victim is held in technical custody by Chief Investigator Blayney F. Matthews, of the district attorney's staff.

The girl, said to have been one of the youngest members of Miss Day's mart, has given a detailed confession, it was learned, to the district attorney, naming the millionaire showman.

From Miss Day, District Attorney Buron Fitts learned that the girl had been "sold" to the millionaire in San Diego.

Because the asserted crime took place in San Diego County the complaint against the millionaire will be issued there, it was stated. Shortly after the details of the case against the showman had been completed, Investigator Leslie T. White, of the District Attorney's office, was on his way to San Diego.

MAN OF MANY LOVES HANGED

BEDFORD, England, March 10.—(AP.)—Alfred Arthur Rouse, man of many loves who last November tried to "die by proxy" in an effort to escape the responsibilities of his adventures, today was hanged for the murder of an unidentified man.

He was the first person in 145 years to be executed for the murder of an unidentified victim. The body of the man he killed was kept unburied throughout his trial and subsequent incarceration in the hope that Rouse in a last minute confession would tell who he was.

Investigation revealed an extremely complicated love life. Experts theorized in court that he had become convinced that death offered about the only solution and had conceived the plan of a double which would permit him to "die" legally at the expense of another's life.

SUITS TIE UP CLARA'S GEMS

LOS ANGELES, March 10.—(AP.)—If Clara Bow has $1,500 worth of jewelry in the district attorney's office, the outlook is, in the parlance at the Hall of Justice, that she is going to have "one tough time" getting it back. An attorney and a bank already are after it.

The actress, represented by her proxy, Rex Bell, made a futile move to lay claim to it yesterday. It was the jewelry taken from the safe deposit box of Daisy De Voe, when that young woman was arrested last November for stealing from Clara.

At the trial, in which Daisy was convicted, Clara said it was hers; Daisy said it was hers, and William Beirne, Daisy's attorney, remarked he didn't give a continental whose it was, attaching it for fees. Following which a bank in Beverly Hills also tried to attach it, claiming Daisy gave them a worthless check.

That was the situation when Movie Cowboy Bell appeared in the district attorney's office to claim the jewelry.

M'COOK, Neb., March 10.—(AP.)—Five persons were killed, two were injured seriously and three others were badly cut when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by an east-bound Burlington train at a grade crosing near Colfer, Neb., late yesterday.

RELIEF RUSHED TO QUAKE ZONE

BELGRADE, March 10.—(INS.)—Augmented relief forces labored in the Central Balkans today to alleviate the suffering of thousands rendered homeless by week-end earthquakes, in which at least 200 lost their lives, and to prevent an outbreak of epidemic.

Jugoslavia was the worst hit of the three Balkan countries. Twenty of the destroyed towns and villages are within its borders. The remaining 14 severely damaged communities are located in Greece and Bulgaria.

SNOW, ICE PERIL ROAD TRAFFIC

From five to seven inches of snow hid ice-coated highways in the Pittsburgh district today, and endangered traffic. By tomorrow, with a cessation of snow and rising temperatures, the highways are expected to be returned to ordinary traffic conditions, the Weather Bureau reported. Close by Pittsburgh where the snow fall was lighter roads were passable due to the work of road crews.

Fourteen-foot snowdrifts were reported from Greenwood Club, near Brookville, through a section which has from five to seven inches of snow on the ground. Six inches of melting snow covers the ground at Confluence, on the Youghiogheny River.

All roads in Susquehanna and Wayne counties, north of Scranton, were reported completely blocked with snow drifts.

Last night's snowfall was the tail end of the storm which swept Pittsburgh Sunday, moving eastward. In its wake cloudy weather is following, and by tomorrow it is expected most of the snow will be gone.

THOUSANDS GET WORK ON ROADS

Army of Workers Hired to Clear Away Snow; Death Toll Increased by Seven

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Damage from week-end storms along the Atlantic seacoast today was estimated at several millions as additional reports of havoc done by wind and wave were tabualted. Damage along the Connecticut coast alone was estimated at $1,000,000.

The toll of lives taken by the storms was believed to have been increased by five as wreckage washed ashore near Newburyport, Mass., indicated sinking of the motor craft Julia with her crew.

Fair weather prevailed generally today from New England to New Jersey. At Rochester the heaviest March snowstorm in 15 years was recorded.

At Gloucester, Mass., part of a cockpit and an airplane wing were washed upon the beach. There was no identifying sign on them. The belief was expressed that the sea finally had given up a ship that had failed to make a Trans-Atlantic crossing. At Winthrop, a Boston suburb, an aviator's helmet and goggles were found.

TWO MORE DIE IN WEST

CHICAGO, March 10.—With thousands of men working in cities, towns and along highways of the middle western states, business was gradually returning to normal today after the week-end's 16.4 inches of snow.

Two more deaths were reported in Chicago, attributable to the storm, bringing the total to 18.

STORM HITS ENGLAND

LONDON, March 10.—(AP.)—Southern England, which until this week had escaped severe winter weather, was making up today for the lapses of the past three months.

A temperature of 22 degrees Fahrenheit prevailed in London this morning, while thousands of erstwhile unemployed engaged in removing from the streets an estimated 9,000,000 tons of snow which fell yesterday, the heaviest fall in 20 years.

Among incoming liners buffeted by the storm was the Cunarder Laconia which shipped a huge wave off Cornwall, scattering a party of seamen working on deck and injuring two, one of whom died.

FRANCES KIER IN 2D WEDDING

PARIS, March 10.—(AP.)—Miss Frances Myler Kier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Kier, of Pittsburgh, Pa., was married today in a religious ceremony to Baron Jean Pellenc, of Paris. The civil ceremony was performed yesterday.

It was a simple ceremony by the Rev. Chauvin in the Church of St. Phillipe du Roule. The bride was unattended. Baron Gabriel Pellenc, the bridegroom's brother, was best man.

Miss Kier wore a white satin gown with a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of lilies. After a wedding tour of the Balearic Isles and a visit to the United States, the couple will live in Paris.

MAYOR KLINE IN COUNCIL CHAMBER BEFORE DEPARTMENT HEADS AND SPECTATORS SWEARING IN SUCCOP'S SUCCESSOR

Councilmen Quote Scripture on Quiz

Quotations from Scripture were used freely by Councilmen in prepared statements yesterday, defending their action in voting to defend the investigation of the Mayor and City Controller into irregularities in the Department of Supplies.

Two minority members Robert Garland and Charles Anderson—stuck to actual statements of fact and spoke extemporaniously as their votes were recorded against the measure.

Their statements, in part, follow:

ROBERT J. ALDERDICE

"Council has always maintained that the proper place for this complaint was the Mayor and the Controller, as the Mayor is the head of the city government and has the power to hire and discharge any of the city employes either in his cabinet or in the several governmental departments. The Mayor and the Controller held an investigation; whether it was an open or closed investigation does not matter to Council.

"The fact of the matter is that an investigation was held, and the Mayor must have found some things that were not satisfactory to him, because after the investigation he conducted, he immediately discharged the director of the Department of Supplies, which I presumed he thought would be sufficient punishment to the director for neglect of his duties in that department.

"There is nothing to be gained by an investigation of the nature that the newspapers have spoken of. Only last week many of the newspapers of the country were carrying complaints against these investigations because of the amount of expense that they were costing the taxpayers of the country. One paper went so far as to say that the Nye investigating committee at Washington had spent several hundred thousands of dollars and had not accomplished anything."

HARRY A. LITTLE

"I regret that I was absent from the city when the debates and discussions were held in Council the past few weeks. Upon my arrival last Monday, I listened to the discussion regarding the resolution from the League of Women Voters, requesting a public hearing. I thought at that time that it was customary and proper to refer the resolutions to the proper committee and I so voted, and in committee we adopted the resolution we have before us today.

"I believe it is the orderly and dignified manner of conducting Council's business. It seems to me to be the decent thing to do—to afford these elected officers—the Mayor and the Controller—an opportunity to properly investigate these matters. It is simply a courtesy to them and their office.

"I believe that within a short time their report will be in our hands, and then if circumstances make it appear that a public investigation should be made, I do not feel that Council will be lax in its responsibility.

"I might add, Mr. President, that if the Controller needs funds for his audit, I, for one, will vote to give him any amount necessary to get to the bottom of this mess."

M. J. MULDOWNEY

"It is unfortunate that a deliberate attempt has been made to place the Council in a false light before the citizens and taxpayers. The record of the proceedings will show that the Council has not refused to give a hearing nor investigation. On the contrary, just the opposite was the truth.

"The Mayor, as the authority responsible for the director of supplies, has advised Council that he has dismissed that director for certain irregularities which were enough in his opinion to justify such dismissal, so that as far as the Mayor is concerned, it is very unfair to charge that he did not act as promptly as circumstances permitted. The Mayor and the Controller joined in a report to Council, which is now a matter of record, in which they recommended certain changes regarding specifications and various other matters. Council has accepted these recommendations and today we are voting on the action of the Finance Committee, from which the resolution before us came.

"In addition to this we have a further report from the Controller stating that he is proceeding with the Bureau of Governmental Research along the lines as recommended by the joint report of the Mayor and the Controller."

GEORGE J. KAMBACH

"This report of the Finance Committee should be received and approved. It is not an evasion of the real issue; it is not a sidestepping of responsibility; it is not intended for delay; but it is a comprehensive outline of the proposed solution of the problem before us, namely, the correction of the evils complained of in the communications addressed to this body.

"There are two ways of approaching this problem—one by public hearing or by public investigation; the other by private investigation. The decision as to the course to pursue rested with Council by virtue of the law, and it decided in favor of the latter. Naturally there is difference of opinion; and there ever will difference of opinion.

"Mr. President, the adoption of this report does not preclude the recovery of any monies from guilty parties; the prosecution of violators of the law is not interfered with; the bonds of the Director of Supplies are not affected. None of the rights of the City of Pittsburgh have been surrendered.

"Council is big enough to do this job; and it will do it.

C. B. CONNELLEY

"When I voted to have this matter referred to the Mayor and the Controller, I was sincere, and still think it the proper procedure. The City Council is the legislative department of the city and in it the laws are made. It is the duty of Council to see that these laws are properly executed, and if they countenance complaints made by taxpayers or citizens, it is their duty to investigate these complaints. But, these investigations should be conducted in an orderly and dignified manner—in the manner provided by the rules and regulations of Council and in accordance with the laws approved by that body.

"In handling the city's business, it is very hard, indeed, to please everyone, but when Council is given a duty (which I consider a public trust), I still believe that a slow, judicious investigation when a complaint arises and when I know where the authority to rectify and investigate same is placed, is the best. There is not one councilman of our Council today, but that will favor a further investigation should the audit which is now being conducted by the Controller warrant it."

CHARLES ANDERSON

"The petition for a hearing is not a request—it's a demand. I don't feel that I should vote for it under any consideration. That is, I don't think I should vote for this motion to refuse the League of Woman Voters a hearing and an audit of the Supplies Department books and records. I want everyone to know, right here and now, that I have no quarrel with any individual member of City Council. The majority rules and they are ruling today as they have done in the past. My feeble voice of one vote against the majority doesn't mean a thing.

"The investigations Council plans after the audit should not begin at that time. No. They should begin right now. The Controller should refuse to sign all and any warrants for payment for materials bought or for work done for the city where the bids haven't been advertised for. Every director or every department—I don't care who he is—should obey the law and obey it implicitly, in this particular regard. Therefore record my vote as 'No.'"

W. Y. ENGLISH

"One man cannot please everybody. It simply cannot be done. Thanks to the precious heritage of God fearing parents and of a respectable, though poor family, I was taught to put my trust in God.

"You, Mr. Herron, know that those that put their trust in God are trusting aright, because in time of great danger, difficulty or distress, they shall never be confounded. The first law of nature is self preservation, but if our Christian civilization is to advance to the uttermost parts of the earth, the true believer must take his stand for the right in the time of stress.

"Anonymous telephone abuse is too low a depth for me. However, listen to these comforting words: 'Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for My sake. Rejoice and be exceedingly glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets before you.'

"I must confess, it has been mighty hard to stand what has been the daily portion of the members of Council for the last month. I will content myself with following the example of the Savior, when He said: 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do.'

"I do not intend to surrender my powers and duties as a councilman to any influence inside or outside the city government. Unless I find some reason for breaking up the harmony and progress which we have had under Mayor Kline and Controller Kerr, I will continue to labor with them for the city's welfare. If the Controller needs any help he knows where and how to get it.

"Until he asks for help Council has every reason to feel that the Controller knows what he is doing, and we should not distrust or embarrass him."

"Council should not take snap judgment but should consider most carefully, any proposal that would take away from the Controller his work as official auditor of all the accounts of the city."

ROBERT GARLAND

"Public money is public money. In the expenditure of money by a municipality we are governed by certain laws that must be observed. I have been informed that I am playing for favor from the newspapers. This is wrong. You can't depend on them to the extent that they won't attack you. One time they will praise you and the next day start an attack.

"Out of courtesy to the Mayor and the City Controller, I voted to refer the original complaint of Mr. Houston to them for action. I expected a report within a few days. I asked for a reply as quickly as possible, but there was quite a delay. I did not vote as the rest of Council did when the matter came back in the form of a joint report from both the Mayor and Controller. I voted against acceptance of the report. I would like to hear from Mr. Succop. He did not get a square deal (a fair Anglo-Saxon deal, I would call it) from the City of Pittsburgh. He should have been given the opportunity by Council to come in and defend himself. The English and American laws give to every man the right of trial by jury or a hearing by his peers.

"As I understand the matter, he was visited and asked to resign or be dismissed. He should have asked and demanded a hearing. It was a very curt dismissal."

Kerr Names Audit Firm For Own Probe Into Succop Accounts

ORDERS REJECTED

As Col. Dunlap took office Controller Kerr notified him that three purchases authorized by the Department of Supplies had been rejected because they did not come up to specifications. These purchases were ordered before Dunlap took office and after Succop was fired. The orders were for 150 blankets, at a cost of $487.50, and 100 sacks of lima beans for the hospital at Mayview, and a carload of hay, at $27 per ton, for the city stables. Kerr said the blankets were not of the proper width or weight and were stitched rather than hemmed. The beans did not come up to specifications and the hay was not the A-1 grade specified, according to the controller.

Assistant District Attorney William H. Colvin today is expected to inform the accountants of what is wanted in the way of information by the district attorney's office.

SCORES COUNCIL

Mrs. R. Templeton Smith, chairman of the League of Women Voters, declared she was not greatly surprised at yesterday's action of Cuncil. She said:

> "The majority members in Council spent most of the time sidestepping and trying to justify themselves."

The chief speech-making of the afternoon occurred at the time of debate on the motion to ratify seven recommendations made by George Kambach in Finance Committee and place the food investigation for the present entirely in the hands of the Controller and the Mayor.

CROWD IN UPROAR

Today an aroused public was commenting on the use of biblical quotations to bolster up the cause. Two members of Council relied heavily on biblical injunctions.

W. Y. English, quoting from the beatitudes, pointed out the blessings stored up for those who are reviled and falsely persecuted.

The large audience apparently failed to entirely follow the conclusions which English drew from the verses. With each fresh quotation the room rocked with laughter until President John S. Herron brought down the gavel sharply to restore order.

English met the interruptions calmly, declaring that instead of hurling back at accusers poison gas and other missiles as has been his custom in the past, he would content himself with following the Christian principle of forgiveness.

Here a further uproar occurred. English went on to point out that Council on February 9 had referred the original complaint regarding the Department of Supplies to the Mayor and the Controller. He said these two officials in good faith had extended and enlarged the original complaint. No attempt should be made, he declared, to take away from the Controller his work as official auditor of city accounts.

SCRIPTURES AGAIN

Kambach, speaking in favor of the seven recommendations presented by him in Finance Committee, also closed his speech with a scriptural quotation asking for vision to see and do the right.

The things accomplished by Council in the seven recommendations were pointed out by Kambach. He said that within a month after receiving the original letters, Council was ratifying the dismissal of Succop; directing the installation of a new system in the department; asking that standard specifications be prepared, and seeking the help of the Pittsburgh Bureau of Governmental Research.

The prosecution of violators of the law is not interfered with, he declared, since the adoption of the report would not prevent the recovery of moneys from guilty parties.

The recommendations also provide for further action on the receipt of the reports of the controller and the Pittsburgh Bureau of Governmental Research, he pointed out.

The final recommendation set forth that Council deemed it unwise pending the final reports of the investigation by the controller and the mayor to duplicate their work by engaging in a public hearing. The belief also was expressed that the elimination of the source of the trouble would accomplish the desired results.

SPEECHES LENGTHY

After lengthy speeches by every member of Council with the exception of President Herron, Council voted seven to two to accept Kambach's recommendations. Councilmen Robert Garland and Charles Anderson voted no.

The audience was one of the largest in the history of Council. A large majority of those present were women.

The first sign of any weakening in the mayor's majority in Council came on the question of holding up payment of $813 for chandeliers purchased without bids for the mayor's office, and on a resolution to pay Max Parker, contractor, $4,294 for work in remodeling Central Police Station, also without bids.

Garland moved that Council withhold action on the two bills until the citizens' and controller's audit could be completed and an opinion on the legality of the proceeding obtained from the law department. Anderson seconded the motion.

Kambach moved that the motion be amended to strike out "citizens' audit." This carried, seven to two, Garland and Anderson voting against it.

The motion as amended was then put and defeated six to three, Kambach voting with Garland and Anderson for holding up action until legal advice could be received on the legality of paying for contracts over $500, let without bids.

GARLAND, ENGLISH CLASH

Garland, speaking for delay, said:

> "These bills may be all right, but in view of recent court decisions I am not sure that we are within our rights in paying them."

English rose to speak against delay. He said:

> "I regret that my opposition may seem to continue to put me in a bad light. The former chairman of the Finance Committee (Garland) was the man who started this practice and encouraged it. If there is anything wrong with these bills we will be equally as guilty tomorrow as we are today."

Garland replied:

> "I am not asking the gentleman to do anything. I have voted to pass these things before, but I am in doubt today."

A parliamentary mix-up occurred when the vote was taken. It appeared for a moment that Garland had been successful in halting the payment. This was due to a misunderstanding in the way the motion was statetd.

One of the councilmen suggested that they start over again and a roar of laughter came from the audience. Garland's motion was offered and defeated.

PRISONER FAKE CASE BEFORE U. S. COURT

Substitution Plot Trial Among 85 Listed for Erie Term Opening Next Week

Federal District Court will convene Monday at Erie for the regular March session. United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his assistants have scheduled 85 criminal cases for trial, foremost among them the alleged conspiracy to substitute another man for a defendant in a rum-smuggling case.

Defendants in the conspiracy case are Samuel Y. Rossiter, attorney, and Joseph A. Donovan, automobile dealer, both of Erie; James Patrone, alias Joe Jarvis; Lester Beals, and Stanley Wells, alleged Canadian rum smuggler. Wells was never apprehended, but the others are under bonds.

Patrone, under the name of Jarvis, is alleged to have appeared in Federal Court in Pittsburgh, December 31, 1929, in place of Wells, pleading guilty to a rum-smuggling charge. When he was placed in the Erie County jail to serve a two-months sentence, the alleged deception was discovered. Wells is said to be evading arrest by hiding in Canada. He had been arrested under the name of Jarvis, it was said.

The case will be prosecuted by Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh. More than a score of witnesses have been summoned by the government.

PISTOL TO TRAP 'HYMIE' SOUGHT

CLEVELAND, O., March 10.—(AP.)—Evidence to prove the gun used to kill former Councilman William E. Potter was owned by "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin, who is charged with the murder, was sought by police today in Houston, Tex., and in New Orleans.

In one of these cities the police hoped to locate Morris Lieberman, former Cleveland patrolman, whom they believe sold the revolver to Martin.

Detectives here said Lieberman himself was not connected with the killing. He was discharged from the Cleveland police force in 1920 after he was tried and acquitted in the robbery of $6,000 worth of diamonds from a jewelry store.

The gun used in the killing was an obsolete model revolver, not on sale in retail stores for several years. It was found near the apartment where Potter was slain.

Injured by Auto Getting Off Trolley

Alighting from a Troy Hill car at Lowrie and Ley streets this morning, Clara Zoller, 15, of 1109 Troy Hill road, suffered a probable fracture of the skull when struck by an automobile. Henry Ober, 26, of 1452 Firth street, alleged driver, was arrested. The victim was taken to Allegheny General Hospital.

Public Works Quiz Demanded

opinion of the city engineer does not concur with that of other competent men who have been consulted. He declares:

"I charge that this practice is careless, unbusinesslike and opens the door to fraud in the city, which is undoubtedly indulged in. I therefore request your honorable body (City Council) to grant a hearing and investigation of the system of preparing and letting city improvement contracts."

One of the three examples furnished to the Mayor in which actual quantities of materials ran far ahead of estimated quantities was the widening of Lincoln avenue from Lemington to Frankstown avenues. On this job the excess amounted to $22,022.79, or 20 per cent of the original contract.

An examination of the final estimates, according to Evans, disclosed the main source of the large excess. It lay in the payment for larger quantities of different materials and work than those shown in the estimated quantities furnished by the city engineers to the bidders, he declared.

BASIS FOR BIDS

The estimated quantities are the basis both for the bids and for the awarding of contracts. A list of the various items entering into the improvement is prepared along with the estimate of how much of each will be used on the job.

In many instances the quantities of material paid for ran many times the original estimates.

Mr. Evans had been warned by George H. Flinn in writing that there was "something wrong" in the Department of Public Works, and said he believed the facts argued carelessness and opened a wide door for the irregularities charged by Mr. Flinn.

Although speaking of the good faith, honesty and standing of the city engineer, Mr. Evans holds that the overrunning in the final estimates is a dangerous and careless practice.

All the data in his possession is available for the inspection of Council, he says. This, taken with the files in the controller's office and an examination of the city employes concerned, he believes, will uncover information which will bring about necessary reforms and reduce opportunity for favoritism and graft.

The cost of garbage and rubbish disposal, about $1,883,000 per year, is entirely too high, Mr. Evans contends.

He said:

"Based upon my investigation in connection with the garbage suit the company must have earned in 1930 at least 125 per cent upon the net investment of the original owners, without deduction for depreciation and interest."

EXPLAINS GARBAGE SUIT

Touching on the garbage suit, Mr. Evans said he found that the city paid for more wagons than were weighed. That, according to his view, is the explanation for the curious fact of the high tonnage per capita of Pittsburgh garbage.

The weighmasters, supposed to guard the interests of the city, he said he found to be political appointees, and many of them unfit for the job. One man, discharged for deserting his post for hours, he said, was reinstated at the urgent insistence of a member of Council.

Asked what member of Council sponsored the negligent garbage weighmaster, Mr. Evans replied:

"It was John S. Herron."

He said he found that labor on bridge repainting in January and February of this year totaled $9,640.50, and material $25.23.

An investigation of the cost of cleaning and operating the City-County Building shows that it cost twice the amount spent in well-conducted office buildings in Pittsburgh, he declared.

FIGURES SUBMITTED

Figures showing some of the increased quantities in the Lincoln avenue paving job follow:

GORDON LAWYER FIGHTS SEIZURE

NEW YORK, March 10.—(INS.)—While District Attorney McLaughlin, of the Bronx, declared "definite progress" was being made in the investigation of the murder of Vivian Gordon, John A. Radeloff, the slain woman's lawyer, today renewed his fight for liberty.

Radeloff, held in bail of $20,000 as a material witness, obtained an order from Supreme Court Justice Leander B. Faber, of Brooklyn, ordering McLaughlin to show cause today why the attorney should not be released.

What progress was being made in the investigation was not revealed.

A new clue collapsed last night when a taxicab driver who was held for questioning was dismissed. He was questioned after it was learned he had converted a limousine into a cab. Authorities said he knew nothing of the crime.

Pierre M. Franklin, of Montreal, brother of the slain woman, who suffered a nervous collapse Sunday, was improved today.

GIRL WHO FLED FIRE SOUGHT

County detectives today were still searching for a 19-year-old girl to determine the cause of a blaze in a cottage in a summer camp colony on Little Creek road, near Undercliffe, which took the life of John Griffith, the caretaker.

The girl, scantily clad, fled while the fire was at its height. Detectives said the fire climaxed a drinking orgy which began Saturday. The young women, known to detectives by the name of Angelino, lives in Uniontown, the sleuths reported.

A TRIBUTE
........TO A MAN

Back of the success of any great institution will be found the influence of one man. That man in our case is Mr. David May, of Cincinnati, and may we take this opportunity to pay him the tribute he so richly deserves.

Over 50 years ago, when credit was a privilege, Mr. May, imbued with the inherent honesty of the American public, founded a furniture store in Cincinnati. He trusted the people and made better homes possible to the man of modest means.

Mr. May, although the years have taken their toll a bit, is today stalwart and still mindful of his responsibilities to the public. No one takes greater pride than he, as we approach our Silver Anniversary, in the growth and development of this institution. It is indeed fitting, therefore, that we thus express our indebtedness to Mr. David May—the man.

The boyhood days of Leo Lehman were spent in that store—his plastic years when he sat at the footstool of this master and learned those fundamental principles of fair dealing and service which, as manager, he has carried to fruition in this Pittsburgh store during the past 25 years.

NO. 10 OF A SERIES OF ADVERTISEMENTS ON THE STORY OF OLIVER TWIST

Original George Cruikshank Illustration through Courtesy of The Houghton Mifflin Company

Nancy's murderer... cornered on the high roof... fell and hung himself

Bill Sikes' hour of doom had come. Haunted by the sad eyes of the girl he murdered because she wanted to give up her wicked life, he seized knife and cord, when the vengeance-seeking mob broke into his hiding-place. Out over the roof he crawled and looked down into thousands of unpitying faces. Escape seemed impossible but there was a ditch below and if he could let himself down the rope's length, cut the rope and drop into the ditch, he might get away. Furiously he knotted his rope about the chimney, made a slip noose on the free end, seized the knife and lifted the noose to drop it under his armpits! Just then, with the rope poised, his foot slipped and he fell, the noose closing around his throat. One convulsive shudder after the rope straightened out . . . and Nancy's murder was avenged.

THE OLIVER TWIST!

It's new and different . . . a finer flavor . . . a brand new shape . . . a smoother texture . . . a balanced blend of laboratory-tested ingredients, perfectly baked! How the children and grown-ups like it! No other bread ever tasted half so good! Stop the Haller man and set this treat before your family today!

$22,500 SOUGHT TO BUILD SPANS

Lang has requested $17,500 for construction of a footbridge from the Duquesne Incline Company building over West Carson street. An agreement will be entered into with the city, Pittsburgh Railways Company and the Duquesne Incline Company, subject to approval of the Public Service Commission, as principals.

The second request is for erection of a footbridge over and on tracks and property of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad, South Side, at an estimated cost of $5,000. Both ordinances were referred to the Committee on Finance.

FATIGUE MAY CAUSE COMMON COLD

System is More Susceptible to Infection When One is Exhausted

Nearly every cold that is suffered got its start when the afflicted was "tired out." A fatigued person is easily chilled, and when this condition occurs the sneeze and sore throat make their appearance.

Since most every one experiences fatigue in mid or late afternoon, it is wise to overcome this condition by eating or drinking something sweet. Candy, cookies, sweetened beverages and ice cream are quickly digested, and the energy in the sugar is ready at once to restore vigor. For children, a slice of bread and butter sprinkled with sugar is an appropriate "pick-up."

In these winter days, the importance of diet in relation to the resistance of the system should not be overlooked. The person who eats a wide variety of wholesome food fortifies himself against disease. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.

English Dinner Sets

Service for 12 $37.50 Three Patterns

Fine English porcelain dinnerware in the very newest shapes—with footed vegetable dishes, creamers, and sugar bowls . . . the fashionable almost square salad plates . . . dinner plates with hexagonal outlines . . . in sets containing every needed piece for serving twelve—all at a price never before found on earthenware of this calibre.

KQV ASKS TO MOVE STATION

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

Permission to install a new transmitter and to move the KQV antenna from the Plaza Building downtown to Aspinwall or another site yet to be selected was sought by Paul J. Miller, manager of the station, at an appearance before the Federal Radio Commission today.

Byron A. Strump, secretary of the KQV Broadcasting Company, told commission engineers that the new transmitter would be rated at 1,000 watts, but would operate on the present power assignment of 500 watts.

The new installation, guaranteed by Mr. Miller and Mr. Strump to give better service in the Pittsburgh area, was approved by commission engineers. A confirming order from the Radio Commission is necessary before work can be started on the project.

We are informed also that KQV engaged Louis G. Caldwell, well known radio counsel, to oppose the application of Robert M. Thompson for a new station in Pittsburgh to operate a 500-watt station on 1,380 kilocycles, the frequency now used by KQV. Mr. Thompson is commercial manager of WJAS. The case has been set for hearing April 3.

They may never find "the guy that wrote the Maine Stein Song," but Doc Spaeth ushers to the microphone tonight the man who wrote the song that made the man that made the Stein Song. Tune WCAE at 9:30 for Carroll Gibbons, composer of "My Cigaret Lady."

The people have yearned it and now they're going to get it—an all "blues" program by Paul Whiteman's Orchestra on KDKA at 8.

* * *

Will Rhodes and his daughter, Sarah—a lovable pair—are in Sacred Songs on KDKA at 7:30.

* * *

Two clergymen ask: "In citing your favorite Biblical passage, do you not mean the thirteenth chapter of the first Book of Corinthians?" We do but not the same way City Council interprets it.

* * *

We wonder what time the "King's Horses and the King's Men" went to bed this morning. They started marching yesterday afternoon and were going strong still at 2:30 a. m. today. "I say, old chappie, what beastly business."

* * *

Claude Morris was back at the KDKA microphone last night, seven pounds heavier after two weeks of Atlantic City and salt water taffy.

As we live—the natives of Cincinnati have taken a liking to Vic Erwin's rumba music which failed to create much of a stir when broadcast here.

QUESTION A DAY:

Sunday night a man imitated "Matt Thompkins" with the Boswell sisters. Is he on the air regularly and if so, what programs?—Dorothy G., Mt. Lebanon.

Answer—The impersonation was perfect. It was done by H. Warden Wilson, an NBC engineer, better known to his associates as "Hack" Wilson, because of his resemblance to the Chicago Cubs' player. "Hack" is 27 and six feet tall. He graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1929. His best mimics are those of Matt Thompkins, Seth Parker, Floyd Gibbons, Phil Cook, Bill Munday, Doc Rockwell, Graham McNamee and Norman Brokenshire. He has been on the network several times.

* * *

We don't know that Bill Farren meant it. On the other hand we don't know that he was joking. Anyway, Raymond Knight, otherwise known as "Ambrose J. Weems," of KUKU, was the gentleman he had reference to in last night's slip of the tongue, "Ray Weems."

* * *

Three thousand dollars is the figure being talked about for Duke Ellington's appearance here soon. Promoters of the dance are planning to have him do 30 minutes on WCAE as an "extra." More later.

* * *

"FAMOUS TRIALS"

Everybody's on trial now since Hearst Radio Service stirred the ether with "The Trial of Vivian Ware." Next followed the "Moonshine and Honeysuckle" episode, then Amos 'n' Andy's case, and now—WCAE on Sunday at 10:15 Benedict Arnold takes the stand with Clarence Darrow, his defendant, and James M. Beck the prosecutor.

Men and women from all walks of life will form the jury. Jurors picked so far include Fannie Hurst and Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York.

* * *

The unidentified woman who swooned last night at Andy's trial may be the first wife of Madame Queen's undivorced husband, ventures Jimmy Long, who still clings to the theory that the Madame has been married before without obtaining a divorce.

* * *

STUDIO LIGHTS

That Indian sketch by Empire Builders was excellent . . . they and Lulu Vollmer have the best sound effects on the air . . . swishing of canoe paddles was particularly realistic . . . Ted Lewis has been snared for a network commercial . . . Bill Morehouse, WCAE tenor who sounds like Dick Powell, packs dynamite in the day and writes a radio column for weekly newspapers at night . . . a fine fellow.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, March 10.—The rajahs of radio have recently made valiant attempts to keep pace with the press. Believe it or not, they have actually tried to lead Al Capone, of the Chicago Capones, to the microphone.

Moreover, they sought to have Capone speak to the citizenry on . . . well, you would never guess. Good showmen, the rajahs. They adopt no half-way measures. They would present Capone to the armchair millions in a big way, in a way that would startle the nation or they would not present him at all. They attempted—we'll end the suspense right now—to have him speak to America on "What Prohibition Has Done to Me."

* * *

They almost got away with it. It would have been a broadcast worth a pant to the loudspeakers. And who can say what the consequences of such a talk might have been. It would have certainly illuminated the prohibition question as it has not been illuminated since Volstead stomped out of Minnesota. It might conceivably have given foes of prohibition a new basis of attack.

* * *

Alas, the Caponean voice will not be heard on the radio sea. It will continue to be confined to his Miami fortress, uttering soft but firm orders to valets and varlets.

* * *

Capone, so the story goes, was not averse to talking on the radio. In fact, he was more than willing but there were his wily and unnumbered enemies to consider. Were it announced that he was to speak—and there would have to be an announcement if there was to be an audience for his words—he might jeopardize his precious neck. He might be put on the spot. And so he declined, regretfully, the broadcasting offer.

* * *

As a matter of fact the radio men might have strung a microphone in his Miami stronghold, guarded it against snipers. Perhaps they thought of that. Perhaps facilities were lacking. Perhaps—and this is the more reasonable conjecture — they preferred to have Capone as their guest rather than be a guest of Capone.

William Burke Miller, 'tis said, conducted the negotiations with the racketeer—the same William Burke Miller who watches the paper for unusual broadcasting opportunities, and who frequently goes with his microphones where angels would fear to tread.

* * *

This listening post, believing that good newspaper copy is necessarily good broadcasting copy, has long speculated on the seeming hesitancy of the broadcasters in leading Capone to the loudspeakers. Well, they have made the effort. And it is whispered, with a nod of approval at Miller's enterprise, that they are just as well satisfied the effort was not successful.

* * *

Broadcasting showmanship has also been alert in another direction—direction as far from Capone as a garden tea party is from rum running. The radio rulers, it appears, sought the services of none other than Emily Post, authority on etiquette, to act as the judge in the corn pone dunking controversy. She refused, of course, though not without proper appreciation, it is said, of the tremendous publicity value involved.

But Emily Post would not be caught dunking—not even over the bodies of ten thousand butlers—and so she can scarcely be blamed for rejecting the chance to judge the dunking of others.

* * *

The announcer's lot also is not a happy one. There are always conscientious objectors, ready to whack them over the head.

Old bar fly:

"Since 1919 a whisper has been a scream for help. But it brings results."

Although the seventy-first Congress has been gathered to its predecessors, President Hoover is still sweeping up its crumbs.

Fortunately for the future of everything worth laughing about most of these bills will be honored for eternity with the presidential squelch.

Among the bills to be slapped dignifiedly with the executive negative is the one sponsored by Senator Flimper compelling bootleggers to hold out their hands while making a right hand turn with a loaded truck.

Senator Flimper has a delightful time scampering between bills. It seems that as a very young child the future senator was taking a walk on a windy October day and was chased miles by an autumn leaf.

He recovered in time to negotiate the above charming section of the world's work. A very lovable character.

Then there is Representative Ootwox's referendum requesting that all school children be kept after school until they are old enough to vote. Mr. Ootwox thinks the dear little ones are wasting too much time with the birds, the flowers and the bees.

He is wrong. Nobody ever wasted any time with a bee.

President Hoover will plaster Mr Ootwox's national slogan with enough red ink to make it resemble a western sunset. We do not doubt that Ootwox thinks he is doing a magnificent amendment to the international catalog. But we have already got seven bills of the same caliber interwoven into the legislative fabric.

That's why Congress recesses at stated intervals. To give lawmakers like Flimper and Ootwox a chance to go home and apologize to the constituents they swore to represent.

Rather than seem to criticize President Hoover's powers of veto, we seek to encourage him to greater and more strenuous blots. We have too many laws, supposed to govern human blinks that would not even be a magna charter for a wet animal cracker.

We are ankle-deep in laws crocheted by individuals who had little to do. We don't know what the sponsors think when they get home and look 'em over. They ain't worth a snicker in a hoss-collar.

The man with an average sense of humor can smile at them. But, by all the gravy on King Cole's vest, you cannot laugh at the mistakes of childhood made when you are over 50 years of age.

SIFT CONVICT'S TORTURE DEATH

JOLIET, Ill., March 10.—(INS.)—An inquest today was to open a triple investigation into the death of Joseph Coakley soon after he had been handcuffed to the door of his cell in the state penitentiary here during solitary confinement.

Inquiry which followed Coakley's death brought admission from prison officials that it was a common practice to handcuff prisoners to cell doors for long periods in such a position they could not sit down.

Coakley had been chained with his hands above his head for eight hours Saturday. He had recently suffered an attack of influenza, it was learned. He had been dead three hours when found huddled on a rude bench. A blood clot in the heart was given as the cause of death following an autopsy.

NERVOUS, WEAK ... RUN-DOWN

MRS. MARTHA ALTHOUSE

Harrisburg, Pa.—"About three years ago we had much sickness, my husband was very sick, my mother was old and feeble and about that time my son was taken ill. All these troubles caused me to have a nervous breakdown. A relative, a druggist, advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was so nervous, weak and rundown I don't know how I stood on my feet, my appetite failed and I couldn't sleep at night. I took the "Discovery" and it built my system up good and strong. I felt like doing my work again, slept better and my nervousness disappeared."—Mrs. Martha Althouse, 1403 Regina St. Sold by druggists.

NOVEL SIGNALS FOR TRAFFIC

City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre announced today that traffic actuated stop-and-go lights will be installed at four hazardous intersections as soon as bids can be let and contracts awarded.

The novel type of control mechanism, new in Pittsburgh, and operated by a treadle in the street and a push button arrangement for pedestrians, will be placed at intersections of the Boulevard of the Allies and Seneca street, Boulevard of the Allies and Dawson street, Carson street at the foot of the Duquesne Incline, and East Ohio street and Walkers Bridge.

REVIEWS OF OPERETTA, DRAMATIC PHANTASY, PHOTOPLAY

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Romance can never fade at Heidelberg while the Neckar flows past the old castle and the student steins are filled with foam. So much was conclusively demonstrated last night when the revival of Sigmund Romberg's operetta, "The Student Prince," stirred the hearts of listeners though the tunes were trite and the beer must have been flat, and Ilse Marvenga was missing from the cast. Perhaps the prohibition squad got Ilse at last. Maybe the new Kathi is dispensing only near-beer to keep within the law.

George Seibel

Whatever the brew, her face is fresh and fair—her voice clear and winged for high flights. Her name is Gertrude Lang, and she has flaxen tresses like the girls of the Neckar and the Rhine, and there is a sparkle in her eyes as in the vintages of the old inn.

If there is any one who divides with her the honors of the revival, it is Adolph Link, who plays the waiter Toni—a part he played in the original production. Toni Link's scene with the King at the close of the third act, when he awakens memories of old Heidelberg, was a fine piece of pathos, acted as if he had seen old Joe Jefferson and learned the trick of tears.

Another member of the original cast was George Hassell as Lutz. The role of Lutz has been thoroughly caricatured for purposes of comedy, and yet Hassell gets much real humor into it. He has more spontaneity and kick than De Wolf Hopper, who sang it here last. He can do the funniest things with his face. Only once does he fall beneath the rather low level of his role—when he modernizes his lines with "chuck and double chuck." That is worse than two puns.

ROMANCE STILL LIVES

All in all, as one listens to the old melodies—they are at least eight years old now—they still call up the old spell of romance. Dorothy Donnelly, who made the book from the original play, has not perpetrated any unpardonable sins in her libretto. It is true that in the last act there is a profound genuflection to respectability and the notion that they must live happily ever after—but then the curtain drops. And you go away humming the Drinking Song, the Serenade, the Marching Song and the Waltz and Gavotte.

You may have memories of more gorgeous costuming, of more dashing choruses, of more foam on the beer—but these were perhaps only the illusions of youth. We were all younger eight years ago. The Neckar sparkled more glamorously and the old castle gleamed more redly in the sunset. Life is like that!

But there is always a new prince coming to the old inn—and in this year of grace it is Edward Nell, Jr., who isn't quite the tenor that is required, but looks every inch the scion of royalty and sings with spirit besides acting with sincerity.

AUDIENCE LIKED IT

The important point is that the audience liked it. They liked it immensely. They were amused by the antics of the diminutive Gus Alexander as Hubert, by the pomposity of William Pringle as Von Mark, and by the wholesome humanity of Hollis Davenny as Dr. Engel. They caught the dreamy enchantment of the setting, which has a very picturesque back drop that makes you wish you were in Heidelberg, though it doesn't quite convince you that you're there.

At the popular prices in vogue for this engagement, the excursion is worth all it costs. A Kathi who is young and fresh, a Lutz who is quite infectious in his buffoonery, and a chorus that put the proper percentage of spirit into their drinking songs—makes every one feel like "The Student Prince" himself, young again and back in Heidelberg.

LOVE'S REGRET, WITH MUSIC, FEATURES WARNER FILM

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

And so the shoemaker's daughter married the rich young baron and lived through the years to regret. This, ladies and gentlemen, is the story of "Viennese Nights," all-color film operetta, now in the Warner.

The girl should have married a handsome composer. It was he she really loved. But her shoemaking father thought he also was a matchmaker. So he proceeded to make a mess out of two lives.

However, the production should be treated in a more serious vein. After all, this shoemaker isn't an ordinary fellow—he makes boots for the royal family. Besides, the film has a lot of gay Vienna atmosphere, good music by Sigmund Romberg and Oscar Hammerstein, players who can sing and act and a splash of lavender and old lace.

AND THE YEARS PASS

Action of the story covers a long period of years and extends from Vienna to New York and back again. And the ending is happy enough in a wistful sort of way, with thwarted love finding an idealistic sort of fulfillment after a couple of generations.

Vivienne Segal and Alexander Gray head the cast. Their singing voices register well. Other players include Walter Pidgeon, Jean Hersholt, Louise Fazenda and Bert Roach.

SYMPHONIC POEM

A highlight of the film is a symphonic poem played by a full orchestra at the climax. This impresses as being as fine a thing as the movies have ever achieved in a musical way.

Outstanding song numbers include "You Will Remember Vienna" and "I Bring a Love Song."

All in all, "Viennese Nights" is quite a colorful display. And, from an artistic standpoint, it is a little more than just another screen operetta. It is a musical drama of memories.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The classical dramatic "unities" of time, place and action, which Aristotle declared necessary to good play construction, are observed in "Lysistrata," the Aristophanes-Seldes comedy coming next week to the Alvin. The scene is the gates to the Acropolis, by Norman-Bel Geddes. The date of its original production is 311 B. C. Thus endeth the Greek history lesson for today.

* * *

The "gallery god," in his "peanut heaven," by his approval, gives comfort and sustenance to the dramatic "angel," but those in the "lower region" get all the credit.

* * *

Francis X. Bushman, once known as "the king of movie stars," will play a butler in "Thin Ice" in the Pitt next week. Some actual ex-kings are doing practically that in real life, while Mr. Bushman is only playing.

* * *

Ours is a strange language. When a critic writes about a "finished performance" he intends to be complimentary. But the real finished performance is that of the "flop."

* * *

When "Strange Interlude" first opened in New York a restaurant near the theater was on the verge of bankruptcy. Seventy-two weeks later, when the play closed, the ham and egg man wrote to Eugene O'Neill imploring him to write another nine-act play. So any eating place that is on the verge is advised to hang on until March 23, when "Strange Interlude" comes to the Nixon.

* * *

A theater lobby between the acts of any play suggests the idea that women may have taken to cigarets because they got tired of sitting alone during intermissions. In other words, where so many tire there has to be some smoke.

Comic Singer

Belle Baker, singing comedienne, will be featured in the new stage presentation opening Friday in the Stanley.

HELEN HAYES SIGNS FOR FILM PORTRAYALS

Helen Hayes, for years one of the outstanding young actresses of the American stage, has been placed under contract for work in motion pictures, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer announces.

Among Miss Hayes' earliest stage successes were Sir James Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows" and the Kaufman-Connelly comedy, "To the Ladies."

Edison's Youngest Son Heads New Firm

EAST ORANGE, N. J., March 10.—(AP.)—Incorporation papers for the Calibron Products Company, Inc., were filed by Theodore Edison, youngest son of Thomas A. Edison, the inventor.

The firm will do a general business in experimental work, research, provide consulting engineers of all kinds and erect laboratories for developing and exploiting mineral and vegetable products.

'Death Takes a Holiday' Excellently Presented In Pitt Theater

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Death Takes A Holiday," one of the really excellent plays of the present season, seen here only recently, was given a presentation in keeping with its high dramatic quality by the George Sharp organization in the Pitt last night.

This fantastic, poetic drama, without doubt, is Mr. Sharp's most ambitious undertaking, one that is a far cry from the usual light and frothy, even though amusing, productions customary with stock organizations, and, to the extreme credit of all members of the company, it may be said that they do much more than just "get by."

FINE PERFORMANCE

They give it fine and adequate presentation. And it is the regular company that does it, with only the addition of Anne Forrest and Myra Lehr, in principal roles. Miss Forrest, of course, is a most talented artist, whose accomplishments are well known to audiences of the Pitt, where she was leading woman so long and her presence in the cast does give strength, but the regular players whom we see week after week also give fine account of themselves.

The outstanding point is that the company, as a whole, imparts the feeling that is so essential in a play of this type, each giving the detail, great or small, that is in his—or her—keeping, to make or mar, in the forming of a fitting frame for the setting motivated, first, by Paul McGrath and, second, by Miss Forrest.

MR. McGRATH SCORES

Mr. McGrath, in the role of Prince Sirki, the mortal character assumed by Death on his holiday, reveals powers that he has not heretofore had opportunity to display. His voice is excellent and his control of it in poetic recitatives, grim comedy, and emotional, passionate intensity is marked by fine restraint, although properly measured in fluency. In manner and voice, he is all that this difficult role requires.

Miss Forrest, as the delicate Grazia, object of the love of the prince, gives her characterization a dreamy, unreal, fanciful quality in the spiritual sense, as well as being a visual realization of an airy supermundane being, who feels that she rightly belongs to nothing associated with a material world.

Others of the company whose performances please are Robert Fiske, Alice Ann Baker, Mabel Kroman, Miss Lehr, Katherine Maison, Hugh Banks, Billy Link, Charles Webster and John Winthrop.

Burton Holmes Has New Films of Rome

Modern Rome will be discussed by Burton Holmes as the opening feature of his new travelogue series in Carnegie Music Hall on Wednesday evening, March 18. New motion pictures of the city will be shown. On following consecutive Wednesday evenings these other subjects will be presented: "Oberammergau and the Passion Play of 1930," "The North African Tour," "The Grand Tour of Europe" and "Imperial Abyssinia with the Coronation Ceremonies of the Ethopian Emperor."

No more bathtub ring

BY MARY LEE WORK

How to remove it without rubbing—scrubbing—scouring

An easy way to conquer this and 2 other hard jobs

Would you like to know how to get bathtub rings out of the bathtub without having to go through the drudgery of scrubbing and scouring?

Today, I am going to tell you how to do this . . . and to make 2 other hard jobs easier . . . how to cut dishwashing time in half; how to avoid faded, gray-looking washings.

To do this, you use a preparation called Climalene that you can get for 10c a package at any grocery store.

Thousands of women are using it and taking the time it saves them to shop, go to the movies, and otherwise enjoy themselves.

It makes it possible for you to do all your own work, and still have lovely hands. For it is made from the same elements as costly Bath Salts and thus really acts as a beautifying agent to the hands.

Banish Bathtub Ring

Add a tablespoonful of Climalene to your bath water. It makes the water soft as summer rain. Soap makes a quick, rich lather. After the bath—just rinse the tub. That is all. There just isn't any "high-water" mark. No scrubbing—no rubbing.

To Make Dishes Sparkle Like Jewels

Add one teaspoonful of Climalene to a dishpan of water, use only ¼ the amount of soap you now use. It instantly cuts the grease from dishes and cooking utensils, makes glassware sparkle and china gleam. The Climalene-softened water, plus certain bland cleansing agents, cuts your dishwashing time ½ or more—saves ¾ or more the soap you now use.

To Avoid Faded, Gray Washings

Use 2 tablespoons of Climalene, and ¼ the usual amount of soap. Clothes emerge soft, spotless, utterly without fading. For soap fade, and soap eat are ended this way. In recent tests men's blue shirts were washed 75 times without noticeable fade; sheerest French hosiery 100 times or more—to prove the blandness of this way.

Why It Cleans

Climalene instantly takes all the harshness out of Lake water, medium hard water, and hard water. Makes it soft and gentle as rain water. So soft it does the work with ¼ the soap you use now. At the same time, due to certain bland cleansing agents, it instantly DISSOLVES all grease, dirt and grime, and thus cuts your working time ½ or more, in washing, cleaning and in the dishpan.

Alma Rubens Cheered In Her Asylum Prison By Mother's Letter

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XXXIV.

One gray and sodden morning the head woman attendant came to my cell. There was a gleam in her eye—I had become skilled in the reading of moods in Patton, and I knew that gleam was not one of friendship or encouragement.

"Well," said the head attendant, "you're going to work, you've got to work here. You may be a movie actress, but what counts from now on, is the way you can polish a floor."

Miss Rubens

What she said, didn't hurt me. I was too happy to be hurt.

I was delighted at the idea of something to do that would take me out of my lonesome cell, out among human beings again, even if the human beings were only poor dazed creatures, half dead in the body, and more than half dazed in the mind.

The observation ward was to me an inferno. It was haunted with the hideous memories of suffering and cruelty, and neglect that were a part of the daily and nightly programs there.

I wanted to get out. I wanted to go, where I would not have to shut my eyes and close my ears to keep on the safe side of sanity myself.

So when I was transferred to another building and given a real dress, and real shoes and stockings, to put on, I felt like singing a hymn of thanksgiving.

Glad for Change

I was glad to get out of my flour-sack night gown, with holes for arms and a draw string around my neck.

I was glad to get a pair of stockings and some shoes again, they somehow made me feel human.

To be sure the stockings were coarse black cotton affairs and the shoes were heavy brogans—but I was glad anyhow.

I don't know where the institution of Patton has its underwear made. What they handed me to put on before I donned my dress that first day would not be recognized as underwear, any place in the civilized world.

Rough, coarse, too big here, too small there, and over all came a faded old gingham dress and a little gray woolen cape.

The bottom of the block was covered with old brussels carpet. There was a handle six feet long to the block, and that constituted the tools for my new work.

How I ever survived that first day at the work I had longed for, so cruelly, I do not know.

Insane Scrubbers

I was pushed into the row of insane women, each with her polisher in her poor hand—up and down, back and forth, up and down, back and forth, we shoved the polisher.

My head ached as if it would break, my arms felt as if they would drop from my body any minute. There were two rough nails in each of my brogans and they lacerated my feet terribly.

My head swam, my eyes hurt me so, it was all I could do to keep them open, but I never said a word.

I knew the attendants were watching.

One gasp, one sigh, one little sob of fatigue and away I'd go, back to my narrow cell.

So I worked on and on. When the day was done I shook so from head to foot that it was all I could do to creep back to my ward.

I slept sound that night, worn sore, heart sick, broken in body and in spirit—still I slept, and I was thankful for the work that had tired me out.

At 4:30 in the morning I was awakened, they gave us 10 minutes for breakfast, but I worked 2½ hours every morning before I got that breakfast.

We had either hominy, rice or beans for breakfast, and always the same gray, muddy drink, which it would be flattery to call coffee.

Food Always Bad

The food at Patton is distinctly bad.

Perhaps the other inmates had some attention from physicians while they were there, this I cannot say, but for myself, I do know that the only time I saw a doctor in all the eight months that I was in Patton, was the day I was admitted, and the day I was discharged, as cured.

The time dragged on, with terrible monotony.

There was no time for me to read in the day time. I could not talk to any of my poor dazed companions, and in the evening as soon as the sun set I was put in my cell in the pitch dark.

I hit upon the plan of trying to picture a month as one day.

Thirty sunrises, 30 sunsets, 30 periods of darkness, that I told myself would mean to me one day.

I had eight of these strange days to wait, eight months to pray and hope and wonder about my mother, and my husband, and the good friends who lived out in the real world, the world where people laughed, and talked, and went in and out, like free creatures.

Not one word did I hear from one human soul.

Every Sunday I hoped someone would come, to see me—but no one ever came.

I couldn't understand it, my mother, so faithful and true. I couldn't believe that she had deserted me at last.

Of course, I couldn't blame her if she had.

Left Alone

Time and again I had fooled her, betrayed her, insulted and humiliated her. It wouldn't be strange if she made up her mind never to see me again. But somehow it didn't seem like Mother to do that, and it wasn't like her. I afterward found that she had been to see me time and again, but the people in the office told her that it was best for her not to see me. I must take the cure—alone.

Down I went, down and down, no longer was I Alma Rubens, Mrs. Ricardo Cortez, the successful star in the pictures.

I was just a number—that's all.

Then one day came a ray of hope. I had a letter from my mother.

"Don't think of trying to escape," she wrote. "They will put you in San Quentin if you do."

I began to plan another escape.

2 DAMAGE SUITS ASK $80,000

Claiming she suffered facial disfigurement and the loss of 21 teeth through a street car accident, Bertha Doege, of Dormont, asked $30,000 damages from the Pittsburgh Railways Company in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court. She was a passenger on a Mt. Lebanon car which was derailed by an open switch at Brookline junction, West Liberty avenue, May 29, 1930, and was thrown to the floor and injured when the car struck an iron pole, the suit averred.

George Ficek, of Brackenridge, on behalf of his son, Paul, 6, asked $50,000 damages from William J. Boyer in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court, alleging that the boy's legs were broken when he attempted to cross Freeport road near Carlisle street, Brackenridge, July 25, and was struck by Boyer, driving an automobile on the left side of the road.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics or trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like.

Pittsburgh has followed the line of least resistance in her industrial growth, declares L. W. Monteverde, realtor, in a symposium directed by the Committee on City and Regional Planning of the American Institute of Architects. The city's municipal personality and individuality may be emphasized by the careful planning of future developments and by the use of architectural control, Monteverde explains. John Ihlder, director of the Pittsburgh Housing Association, expresses similar views. Pittsburgh, according to Monteverde, is truly an individual city standing pre-eminent as the workshop of the world. Her development in the past has been one of force and progress following the line of least resistance in the onrush to greater things industrially. He believes that it is possible to secure and maintain a reasonable control of the changes and the growth of any city through the police power of zoning.

PLAYGROUND WORK SOUGHT FOR IDLE

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

While the whole world heaps hot words of criticism and abuse on Chicago, we went out and found something for which we could praise that city. It's praise for the pickpockets of Chicago, and we suggest the pickpockets of Pittsburgh lend an ear.

William Pfarr

A man whose pocket was picked in Chicago told us about it. His wallet contained $7 and the usual documents—driver's license, club cards, etc. He didn't mind losing the $7, but the loss of the papers bothered him.

He was bemoaning things in general the next day when the mailman walked in with the wallet. Everything was intact except the $7. Then he found out that the Chicago pickpockets remove the money from the purses they pick and drop the purse into a mail box. The mailman sees the identification card of the owner and returns it to him.

I OUGHT TO GET DE PRIZE I RETOWNED 30 WALLETS

Pittsburgh's pickpockets are not regarded as especially high-class pickpockets, but here is an opportunity for them to make a name for themselves. Get together, pickpockets, and mail back all those purses, minus the money. Let's see if, by this time next year, we can't have returned more purses by mail than the pickpockets of Chicago. It's a big assignment, but we can do it!

As a prize to the pickpocket who returns the most purses in 1931 Sidewalks will present a brand new bail bond.

We'd like to see Mark Shields or Max Henrici or former Mayor Billy Magee write a piece called "The Politician's Mind" . . .The average politician lives in another world. . .If he spends the day whispering politics with a pal he'd call the evening ideal if he could talk politics with another pal. . . The politician more often than not has a set of principles which he adopted as soon as he entered politics. . .Half the time he doesn't realize he's guilty of this or that because, by the politicians' code, it's okay . . .It never occurs to him to think of the city's money, or the county's money, as the property of the taxpayers. . .He thinks of everything in terms of jobs and salaries. . .If a wardheeler gets a job which requires technical knowledge, of which he has none, your politician's first thought is, "It pays $6.500."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal.,
March 10.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

There is not much humor in this, but there is a whole lot of warning. This "jamaica ginger jag" has hit our coast. Here is what you get in a two-ounce bottle for 50 cents: "First the fingers and toes become numb, then the legs and knees become permanently paralyzed. It seldom reaches above the knees." Among yesterday's cases, a barber with wife and two children, hands totally paralyzed; a laborer with wife and three children will never walk again. At old soldiers' home 32 cases, and two deaths, and all a druggist has to plead is that "he didn't know it was poisoned." This is not to be construed as a prohibition lecture, it's really an ad for just old "corn." It only paralyzes you temporarily.

Poincare, British King Decorated Pershing, Aides

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

—By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING—

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces. Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER LVIII.

The French government had expressed a desire to bestow their decorations on American officers and men, and asked if I would accept an appointment in the Legion of Honor with the grade of Grand Officer.

Gen. Pershing

As Congress had recently granted permission for members of our forces to receive foreign decorations, the French government was advised accordingly, and it was to confer this honor upon me that President Poincare paid his first brief visit to Chaumont, August 6, 1918.

I met him at the station with a military escort and conducted him to my headquarters, where the senior officers of the staff were presented. After that formality we repaired to the small area of barracks, where the headquarters troop and band were drawn up in line for the ceremony.

Meanwhile, the entire headquarters personnel, several hundred men and women, had turned out to witness the proceedings. Both national airs were played and the troops were presented to the President, after which he addressed me briefly in perfect English and pinned on the decoration.

"I am specially pleased," he said, "at this opportunity to thank Gen. Pershing and the brave army under his orders for the very gallant work they did during the past weeks on the field of battle."

I replied, thanking him for the honor, and saying:

"I value this decoration as a mark of recognition by France of the services of the American Army and of friendship for the American people."

Pershing Embarrassed

Then, according to the French custom, President Poincare kissed me on both cheeks, but not without some difficulty, as he was not so tall as I, and it was necessary for him to rise on tiptoe and for me to lean somewhat forward.

I was not insensible to the high personal honor, but regarded it mainly as an appreciation on the part of the French government of the assistance America had already given to the cause.

Without implying the slightest criticism of the form of salutation used in the ceremony, I cannot refrain from confessing my embarrassment, especially as I could hear a hushed laughter from the irreverent Americans in the area who witnessed my situation, no doubt with sympathy.

I thought that M. Poincare himself was probably quite as much embarrassed as I was. Moreover, he must have heard the suppressed mirth as plainly as I.

At this time there was some apprehension as to food supply for the civilian population of the Allies, especially for certain districts in France. Mr. Herbert Hoover, who came to Chaumont in company with the French minister of agriculture, was conversant with the food situation in general. He thought England could be of immediate assistance, but I was not so hopeful, feeling that her stores must be low, due to the employment of so

WOUNDED GIRL STILL IN PERIL

The condition of Naomi White, 29, of 223 Pacific avenue McKeesport, shot by Clyde Linsay, 40, of 570 Harmony avenue, Rochester, was still regarded as serious at McKeesport Hospital today. Miss White suffered bullet wounds of the abdomen and right arm. Linsay, police said, shot and killed himself, the tragedy taking place in the White home Sunday night.

Linsay's body was removed from the county morgue yesterday to Rochester, where funeral services will be held.

CORPORATIONS BLAMED FOR LAW DELAYS

Retain Too Few Attorneys To Handle Cases Listed, Bar Petition Declares

That the Common Pleas Court require corporations, particularly public utility firms, to engage more lawyers in the trial of their cases so that the work of the court may be done more quickly, is the crux of a petition being circulated among attorneys today.

The petition will be presented to the judges of the court after all the members of the bar association have signed it. Sponsors of the movement said that the jurists have already commented favorably on the petition.

It was held that of the number of cases now at issue, 75 per cent are represented by the same 25 lawyers, and that delays occur in the trial of the suits because attorneys defending the action are unable to attend because of other business.

The petition cites the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the City of Pittsburgh as the principal offenders, in that they have not enough lawyers to defend property and personal injury suits and negligence cases.

Twelve men sought the position of chief since Burk's dismissal. Councilman W. R. McGuffin and James McMaster voted for Baumann at the special meeting last night. Councilmen R. P. Fox and A. Hamilton opposed. President Towne then cast the deciding vote. Baumann has been a patrolman five years.

Opera Singer to Copy Bust of Nofratete

Just before the war, an eminent German scientist discovered one of the most beautiful of ancient treasures in Eyypt. It was the portrait bust of Nofratete (or Nefertiti), mother-in-law of King Tutenkahmen, and one of the most spiritual of ancient ladies.

Unveiled in the Berlin Museum just after the Treaty of Versailles, it was until recently the goal of every art lover who went to Berlin. Now the bust is to be returned to the Museum at Cairo, and those who loved this treasure will have to attend the opera to catch a glimpse of the head of the Egyptian Queen, for Sigrid Onegin, grand opera contralto, original as always, has studied this work of art, and has copied it for her makeup in the role of "Amneris" in Verdi's opera "Aida."

Mme Onegin's concert will be given in Syria Mosque, Thursday evening. Her concert, originally to be given February 7, was postponed because of the prima donna's illness.

$300,000 SAVED IN FIRE DRIVE

The City of Pittsburgh, during 1930, was saved $300,000 in fire losses, according to a recent statement from the National Fire Waste Council of the United States Chamber of Commerce. Fire prevention work by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce has placed Pittsburgh first in the list of cities of more than 300,000 in population.

The activities upon which the classification was based included the "fire school" for janitors, watchmen, caretakers and building superintendents; the "Clean Up—Paint Up—Plant Up" campaign in which 200,000 school children in Allegheny County participated, and the program during "National Fire Prevention Week" here last November.

ODOR OF MASH LEADS TO RAID

A cave on a farm near Little Pine Creek road, Indiana Township, yielded prohibition agents 1,040 gallons of mash and a quart of moonshine yesterday.

The odor of the mash was detected by the agents from the road. Following the tracks in freshly-fallen snow, the agents found the entrance to the small cave concealed by a pile of brush. They said that the bootleggers, apparently fearing a raid, had removed the still recently. In connection with the raid the agents reported releasing Ernest Wuerger on his own recognizance.

Water Rent Billing System Held Faulty

The present system of water rent billing for skyscrapers and other large buildings here is wrong, according to a communication from J. W. Bamford, of the Koppers Building Company, to City Council.

Water charges for these large structures should be concentrated on one bill, Bamford believes, instead of being prepared separately. Savings can be made to the renters, according to Bamford, by a change in the system.

City Council today was expected to act on a request from Public Works Director Edward G. Lang for purchase of materials for grading, surfacing, fencing and erecting equipment on playgrounds. It is proposed to have the work, starting soon, be done by men paid by the Allegheny County Emergency Association. Lang's request is for $3,098.82.

A total of 1,437 persons received work application blanks at the five registration stations opened by the association yesterday. The blanks must be signed by the applicants' last regular employers and returned to the stations from which they were obtained.

THREE MEN AWAIT INQUIRY IN SUSPECTED ARSON PLOT

BLAZE STARTED BY OIL, SAY FIREMEN

Trio Held for Quiz After Downtown Building Is Damaged $800 by Flames

Detectives of the bomb and arson squad today were investigating actions of three men who were arrested shortly after fire damaged the American Barber School, in the rear of the second floor of 215 Grant street, shortly after 2 a. m.

At Central Station where they were held as suspicious persons, they gave their names as Emilio Calabrio, 36, of Beechview, and Joseph Lachirnio, 36, of 1430 Hampshire avenue, owners, and Jack Pederson, 34, of 5210 Butler street, an employe.

The fire, which firemen extinguished with chemicals, revealed, Deputy Chief Louis Conley said, an arson plot. About 10 gallons of an inflammable fluid, believed to be carbon oil had been spilt on the floor of the school, according to Conley. Beneath one of the stairs was a candle which apparently had been lighted and placed in an oil-soaked rag, it was said.

The interior of the place was badly scorched by the fire. Conley estimated the damage at $800.

CHANGE OF ZONE LAW FOUGHT IN MT. LEBANON

500 Oppose Plea for Permit To Erect $115,000 Building Before Commissioners

Five hundred Mt. Lebanon taxpayers last night opposed a move to change the township zoning ordinance to permit E. H. Schaffer to erect a $115,000 building at Washington road and Municipal way.

A rising vote was taken at the request of J. V. Long, president, of the Mt. Lebanon Civic League, during a public hearing granted by the township commissioners.

Schaffer made a similar request more than a year ago, but it was denied. Township regulations require that a year elapse before an indentical change in the zoning ordinance may be made.

Last year Schaffer said he wished to erect a commercial building on the site. In his latest application he did not specify what kind of a building he would erect other than to say it would not be a garage or gasoline station.

The proposed change is to be decided at the next meeting of the township commissioners.

A police squad under Capt. John Schnurr and Lieut. Harry Schunk early today surrounded the 900 block, Penn avenue, after a protective agency notified them burglars had gained entrance at 901 and 903. Search of both buildings failed to reveal trace of the robbers. The S. and E. Lando Company, wholesale milliners, reported later that merchandise valued at $30 had been stolen.

Two Negroes entered the fruit store of Cosmo Benico, 54, at 6584 Frankstown avenue. One of the intruders beat him on the head with the butt end of a revolver. They looted the cash register of $25. Benico suffered lacerations which required eight stitches at the Pittsburgh Hospital.

SUCCOP'S SON ROBBED

An armed man leaped on the running board of the automobile of R. M. Succop, of 1110 Carson street, when the car was halted by a traffic light at Ninth street and Duquesne way, and ordered Succop to drive over the Ninth Street Bridge. At Isabella street the driver was ordered to stop. The robber took $4 from him and forced him to drive back to Duquesne way. Succop is the son of B. L. Succop, former director of the city supplies department. The son is a student at the University of Pittsburgh.

Don Stansberry, 3740 Baytree street, attendant in the service station of the Standard Oil Company at Brighton road and Kleber street, was alone in the place last night when an automobile carrying three men stopped in the driveway. Two alighted, drew revolvers and forced Stansberry to open a safe, from which they took $60. They escaped in the machine.

PEDESTRIAN HELD UP

A highwayman robbed John Kiss, 1486 High street, of $20 at Spring Garden avenue and Turtle way last night.

Lloyd McCrory, 5995 Center avenue, reported to police an armed man held him up at Center and Highland avenues, robbed him of $90 and escaped in an automobile. Later the car, owned by S. C. Murphy, of 242 East Evaline street, and reported stolen from the St. Francis Hospital yesterday, was found abandoned at Wallingford and Neville streets.

SMASH WINDOW

Accused of hurling a telephone book through the window of the Arch street drug store early today, W. O. Bishop, of 511 Merchant street, and Robert Beach, 804 Arch street, were turned over to the detective bureau for investigation. Patrolman Joseph Scanlon, who arrested the pair, said Bishop carried a special deputy sheriff's badge and an automatic pistol.

Two white men robbed Bruce Todd, manager of a chain grocery at 2122 Broadway, Beechview, this morning of $75.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

Don't Go Around Feeling Half Sick

There's no excuse for letting yourself get run down. No reason why you shouldn't be 100 per cent fit. The man or woman who feels tired and sickly most of the time won't ever get along in business or social life.

The way to keep fit, doctors tell us, is to take cod liver oil.

But don't try to take cod-liver oil the old-fashioned liquid way. Don't overload your stomach with a lot of fatty nasty-tasting oil. Take it the modern way—in tiny tasteless tablets!

These tablets, called McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, are made from the vitamins of purest Norwegian cod liver oil. All the healthful benefits of the oil are in these tablets. Doctors now prescribe them. The Good Housekeeping Institute has tested and approved them.

All you need to do to get the vitamins your run-down system needs is to ask your druggist for a box of McCoy's. Go to him and get your box today. 60 tablets—60 cents.

Auxiliary of Pittsburgh Hospital Plans to Give Tea-Dance April 17

March, usually ushered in like a lion, and out like a lamb, has reversed its usual procedure, and the same thing, practically, has been applied to the Lenten season. Instead of a solemn hush over all gaiety, there are more plans than ever for parties. Today I can tell you of another social affair that will prove of interest to many folks to take place after Easter.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Pittsburgh Hospital will give a tea-dance in the Hotel Schenley April 17. Miss Mary Hackett is chairman of the affair, and her committee consist of Mrs. Francis A. Keating, Mrs. Lawrence P. Monahan, Miss Mary C. Murphy, Mrs. Charles C. Arensburg, Mrs. John A. Beck, Mrs. Albert S. Beymer, Mrs. E. Hussy Binns, Mrs. Thomas Evans, Jr., Mrs. Harry A. Friday, Mrs. Frank J. Lanahan, Mrs. John F. McCollough, Miss Bertha Reilly and Mrs. Charles T. Satler.

Honor Bride

Among the many social affairs of the Lenten season are several in honor of Betty Ganter Close, daughter of the Howard Dauler Closes, of Murrayhill avenue, whose marriage to Samuel Richard Robb, son of the Samuel G. Robbs, of Latrobe, will take place Thursday at 5:30 o'clock in the Pittsburgh Country Club. A bridge luncheon was given yesterday by Virginia Johnston, who will be a bridesmaid. The luncheon was given in the Johnston home with 14 guests present. The colors were pink and white, with the table centered with pink roses and narcissi.

The guest of honor wore a frock of rose chiffon with the popular cut-steel bead trimming, and Virginia chose black chiffon edged with white lace for her frock. Tonight Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, Jr., is giving the spinster dinner.

Cambridge Springs has attracted Mrs. George T. Price, of Highland Towers, South Highland avenue, and her daughter, Isabel Banker Price. They plan to remain there a week or 10 days.

Plans for Debut

Added to the interesting list of debutantes for 1931 we discussed many Sundays ago, is the name of a Sewickley girl, Martha Mitchell Yost, popular daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter Milton Yost, of Edgeworth. Martha will make her debut during the attractive "little season" at a tea dance her parents will give on Saturday, June 27.

Just now Martha is with her father and mother in Dunedin, Fla. Joining them shortly will be James Mitchell Yost, the debutante's brother, and Frank W. Severance, Jr., for their spring vacation.

And the junior William Larimer Mellons are expected home from Europe on Friday. Before her marriage Mrs. Mellon was Grace Rowley, daughter of the E. H. Rowleys, of Glen Arden drive.

20th Century Club Hears Wilkins

Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins was introduced to the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning by Mrs. Carroll Miller as "able engineer, gallant soldier, aeronautical explorer and knight errant of the air."

In his fascinating talk on "Flying the Ends of the Earth," Capt. Wilkins said he has spent so much time in the polar regions in order to try to control the price of silk dresses. At first hearing this seemed to be merely a witticism, but when he explained that his purpose was to establish a meteorological plan by which the seasons may be forecast, the far truth of his statement was realized.

Cold is the least of the difficulties encountered on these polar expeditions, Capt. Wilkins said, as he went on to explain that fur is worn next to the skin and that its gentle friction keeps up a healthy circulation. Indeed, for his projected submarine expedition, on which he will write exclusively for the Sun-Telegraph and other Hearst newspapers, Capt. Wilkins said he has had installed a refrigerating plant to counterbalance the warmth of the engines.

No less fascinating than his talk yesterday were the motion pictures he showed of his Arctic and Antarctic adventures, on which he has flown over thousands of miles never seen by other men. Films of his reception in other countries and of the Graf Zeppelin trip were also shown.

The nominating committee of the club has announced this slate: President, Mrs. Charles S. Shoemaker; first vice president, Mrs. Frank Trevor Hogg; recording secretary, Mrs. A. W. McEldowney; corresponding secretary, Mrs. George B. Berger; treasurer, Mrs. George W. J. Bissell; directors, Mrs. William Watson Smith, Mrs. John A. Murtland and Mrs. H. H. McClintic.

BLACK AND FLAME COLOR PROVES SAFE COMBINATION

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 10.—A safe combination that is hard to beat is that of black with flame color. It hasn't been used for some time except by individual women who are addicted to this fascinating color combination, but this season it has been noted in various collections. It is not so good in heavy fabrics, but is certainly effective in sheer and semi-sheer fabrics such as georgette, chiffon or a thin crepe weave.

LOTS OF WOMEN who select black suits will no doubt take the opportunity of adding a bodice or blouse of a flame-colored fabric, while many a simple black evening frock that has done valiant service throughout the season will be done with flying colors of flame, in the form of slippers, scarf and hankie. It should be remembered though that black and flame should only be combined in a suit or ensemble when it is a particularly good one. In an inexpensive outfit, it always has a garish, rather theatrical look.

DEEP FLARING cuffs have diamond-shaped insets of the crepe. The soft scarf collar is knotted at one side. Bright, flame colored georgette makes the basque bodice gathered at the front and sides. The tie, knotted in front, has double ends edged with shallow fringes. This type of suit will be much used for afternoon town wear later in the season.

PILLS ARE OFTEN DANGEROUS

MOST laxatives have to be taken in ever-increasing doses. Otherwise, they lose their power. The body needs roughage.

One of the most natural ways to obtain this roughage is by eating a delicious cereal: Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Read what Mr. Albert F. Parker of Massachusetts has to say:

"I am 52 years old and have put in years suffering from constipation. Bought all kinds of pills and drugged myself with them and awoke lots of mornings with a headache.

"Haven't taken one pill since I began on Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I am now feeling the best I have felt in 20 years."

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are guaranteed to give relief. At your grocer's, in the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"Colorful fabrics cost no more than plain, drab ones. And with Lux we no longer fear that they'll fade in washing.

"So use the witchery of color all over the house! Inexpensive flowered slip covers, bright cushions in the living room . . . Colorful cretonnes, pastel organdies, perky ginghams to frame windows in color . . . Table linens in fresh, cheerful tones to make mealtimes festive . . . Dainty bedspreads and bureau scarfs in the bedrooms.

PERSHING MET HOOVER OVER FOOD NEEDS OF FRENCH

CHIEF OF A. E. F. TOOK OVER 1ST ARMY

Onlookers Had Laugh as Poincare Kissed General On Presenting Decorations

much of her shipping to carry American troops, but I was willing to accept his views and offered to aid him in any possible way.

On August 8, I again turned my attention to the organization of the First Army. At the recently established headquarters of the First Army at La Ferte-sous-Jouarre, arrangements had been completed to include in our First Army the First and Third Corps, composed of American divisions then on the battlefield. The transfer of command from the French to the Americans was to have occurred August 10.

Plan American Campaign

The rapidly changing situation in the salient had, however, already made this step inadvisable. When it was first proposed, the battle was in progress, but by August 6 the lines had become somewhat stabilized along the Vesle River, and it was evident that further operations on this front would be limited for the time being.

August 8 the French and British armies had combined, under command of Marshal Haig, in a drive against the German lines between Montdidier and Albert. The attack came as a surprise to the Germans and was the beginning of a splendid success. By the end of the first day an advance of more than six miles had been attained. The time appeared propitious for activity further east.

As the American Army was now an accomplished fact, it seemed advisable to begin preparations immediately to carry out the plan of campaign adopted July 24, providing for a distinctive American operation against the St. Mihiel salient.

I motored to Sarcus August 9, and after discussing with Marshal Foch the changed situation in the Marne sector and the practical stabilization of the front on the Vesle, I suggested the transfer of the First Army Headquarters to the St. Mihiel region, where it could begin immediate preparations for the proposed offensive. We considered the outline of my plans, and without hesitation Marshal Foch acquiesced in the transfer.

Returning to Paris the same afternoon I went to Provins to talk the matter over further with Gen. Petain.

We took stock of available divisions for the St. Mihiel operation, and he said I could count on him definitely to do everything in his power to furnish whatever we might require.

General Kept Busy

Having thus reached a general understanding regarding the preliminary details of the move, and after spending the night at the quarters of Maj. Clark, chief of our mission, I drove the following morning to La Ferte-sous-Jouarre to take formal command of the First Army and to give instructions to my staff regarding the movement of headquarters to Neufchateau.

My days, from the time of my arrival in France, had always been too short, but it now seemed that several days of arduous work had to be crowded into one. The sphere of our activities had become extended and many important matters required my personal attention almost at the same time, necessitating a great deal of strenuous travel.

After the hurried trip to the principal installations of the Services of Supply it was necessary to spend a day or so here or there—at Paris, Chaumont, on the Marne or in the St. Mihiel region—holding frequent personal conferences with Foch, Petain, Haig and others.

My diary notes the following:

"Chaumont, Tuesday, August 13, 1918. Came through Paris Sunday and telephoned Chief of Staff to announce formation of First Army. Went to 33d Division, which was still engaged in British offensive.

"King George visited the Division Headquarters Monday and decorated Gen. Bliss and me and several men of the 33d. Went to see Field Marshal Haig to arrange release of three of our divisions. Returned to Paris and saw Winston Churchill, Lord Weir and Stettinius about artillery and aviation. British can provide us with additional artillery.

Mr. Churchill

"Told Clemenceau this morning of my talk with Sir Douglas, and asked Mott to advise Marshal Foch. Have asked for Hugh S. Gibson, now in Paris, to supervise propaganda in enemy countries. Returned to Chaumont in afternoon."

PRESIDENT POINCARE GEN. PERSHING

France's president during the World War decorating Gen. Pershing with Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor, highest award.

The request for Mr. Gibson's services was disapproved, as the department did not think it wise that Mr. Gibson, who was in the Diplomatic Service, should be associated with that work, as the State Department has been disassociated from it and the responsibility for propaganda had been placed upon the Committee on Public Information.

The 33rd Division (Bell) was still with the British when the combined attack of the British 4th and the French 1st Armies in the Montdidier-Albert sector began August 8. The division was in front line training with the British 4th Army and was attached to the British 3d Corps for the operation, the 131st Regiment of Infantry being assigned to the British 58th Division.

Make Good Progress

This regiment joined in the attack August 9 against the Morlancourt Chipilly spur north of the Somme. It reached its objectives in splendid fashion and occupied a line on the western edge of Gressaire Wood, extending southward along the river.

August 10, it continued to progress against decided opposition, gaining the eastern edge of the forests of Fosse and Marcon. During the following three days, the command having been shifted, the 131st Infantry, under the Australian 4th Division, attained a line just west of Bray-sur-Somme. The three other regiments were in reserve during the operations. The 131st Infantry was relieved August 20, having advanced over three miles and suffered heavy casualties.

I motored to the British front Sunday to be present at 33rd Division Headquarters, near Molliens-aux-Bois, on the occasion of the visit of King George, who was then visiting his armies. Gen. Bliss had preceded me and we both spent the night there.

Gen. Bell

That evening Gen. Bell, relating the details of the participation of his troops with the British, said their services had been urgently requested and that they had acquitted themselves well.

The King arrived August 12 to present decorations to selected men of the 33rd Division who had participated in the recent attacks of the British Army. Soon after his arrival the King invited Gen. Bliss and me to his room, where he presented me with the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath and bestowed the order of St. Michael and St. George on Gen. Bliss.

King Wanted Americans

The presentations were informal, as the King simply handed the decorations to us in turn, at the same time expressing his appreciation of American assistance.

His Majesty, speaking, of the employment of the American troops, said he was anxious to have as many as possible serve with the British army, that their presence had an excellent effect in stimulating the morale of his men, and that although the British troops had never lost spirit they had been sorely tried.

He remarked that he was not a politician and did not see things from the politician's point of view, but he thought it would be advantageous to have some Americans serving with his armies. He suggested that they might be brought in through the port of Dunkirk, which could be placed at our disposal.

His Majesty spoke of the friendly sentiments he held for America and of how much it would mean after the war to be able to say that the two English speaking races had fought side by side in this great struggle.

I expressed entire agreement that friendly relations ought to be stronger after the war, but explained that we were now forming an army of our own and would require practically all our troops as soon as they could be assembled. The King said he appreciated that, but hoped some divisions might continue with the British.

At the conclusion of our brief conversation we accompanied the King to the place where the men were assembled for the ceremony. He was gracious in his compliments as he pinned the decorations on our men, and the recipients were extremely proud.

As soon as the King departed I left with Boyd for Sir Douglas Haig's advance headquarters to ask the relief of some of the American divisions then with the British armies.

Haig Disappointed

When last at Marshal Foch's headquarters I had suggested that he should make the request of Marshal Haig for these divisions. But he had hesitated for some reason, which I presumed to be either the coolness that was said to have arisen between him and Marshal Haig regarding the use of some British divisions sent to the French front near the Marne salient to recuperate, or his knowledge of how badly our troops were needed on the British front. In any event he asked me to discuss the matter myself with Marshal Haig.

We found the marshal on his train near Wiry-au-Mont. I brought up the subject and spoke to the marshal of the letter he had written me a few days before, saying he would like to use some of our American divisions in an attack he was about to undertake.

I referred to our plans then in progress of forming an American army for the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient, and said I should be compelled to withdraw from his front at least three of the five American divisions still there in training. Referring to the conference with Marshal Foch at our meeting in July, I said that under the circumstances it would not be possible to leave our troops here and there among the Allies any longer, as their services would be required with our own armies.

In reply, Marshal Haig said he had understood that the American divisions had been sent there to be trained and to serve on the British front and that now, just when they had become useful, it was proposed to withdraw them. He had hoped, he said, that these divisions would remain, and was disappointed to have them removed.

Matter Arranged

I reminded him of our agreement that these troops were at all times to be under my orders, and that while they had been placed behind his armies for training, yet they were to be used in battle only to meet an emergency.

I emphasized the fact that we were all fighting a common enemy and that in my opinion the best way to help toward victory was for the Americans to fight under their own flag and their own officers.

I could well understand the field marshal's feelings. His armies had suffered very heavy casualties, were worn with continuous fighting, and defeat had stared them in the face. Now that the tide had turned and the offensive was to be resumed, it could not have been otherwise than disappointing to have our large divisions of vigorous, keen young Americans transferred to another field of action.

I gave Marshal Haig my assurance that his desire was fully appreciated and that I regretted the necessity which impelled me to make this request just at this moment, but in accordance with our agreement, I must insist on having them. He acknowledged the understanding and said that, although he needed our troops, he realized my position and my reason for their withdrawal. He then said, in his frank, straightforward way:

"Persh..., of course you can have them; there can never be any difference between us."

Leaving British headquarters with the matter satisfactorily arranged, I felt that Marshal Foch would be much relieved that his intervention would not be required.

When Your Cough Hangs On, Mix This at Home

The best cough remedy that money could buy, can easily be mixed at home. It saves money and gives you the most reliable, quick-acting medicine you ever used. The way it takes hold of stubborn coughs and chest colds, giving immediate relief, is astonishing.

Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex. Pour this into a pint bottle, and fill up with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. It's no trouble at all to mix, and when you once use it, you will never be without it. Keeps perfectly and tastes good—children really like it.

It is surprising how quickly this loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and soothes and heals the inflamed membranes. At the same time, part of the medicine is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes, and helps the system throw off the whole trouble. Even those severe coughs which follow cold epidemics, are promptly ended.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known in medicine is more helpful in cases of severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Single Men Too Plentiful To Covet Married One

Are you in love with a married man—

And are you falling for that old line that "his wife doesn't understand him?" Tressa was . . . and did . . . And for years she waited . . . gave all she had to give . . . endured shame . . . neglect . . . bitterness . . . jealously—until finally she brought her sore heart to us. And we told her to give the big moocher the air. Today, Lotta and Yvonne echo that advice. They too once fell for a line like that . . . Listen while they tell it. Lotta first:

"You're absolutely right," she starts her letter. "Tressa is wasting her life and that's just too bad. I'll tell you how I know. Years ago I fell hard for a man who was married. He was handsome, polished and refined. He professed the same feeling for me . . . said the same things that Tressa's married man says. He too was violently jealous, and made the same promises to me. And did I believe him? Sure. I fell for every lie he told me. Gave him years of abject devotion, living only for the time when we could marry. He was years and years older than I, and I was flattered and madly in love. I cried for hours over him—listened to him tell me how cold the wife was—angled and schemed to get him to leave her, believing that then we'd be married and happy.

Returned to Wife

"We spent every hour we could together and it went on for years—years! He raved if I had young friends of the opposite sex. He used to accuse me of all sorts of things if I even so much as talked to a young man. Then, after we had it out, what did he do? Went right home to his wife with a smile on his face, ate her meals and supported her, and lived with her as a husband. Finally she suspected, and they came to a showdown. He told her he loved me, and she packed up and left. He came, red-eyed, to me and told me it was all over. We made our future plans. I was both happy and miserable. My conscience hurt me, but I was madly in love—then—and very young. Well in three weeks, what happened?

"I woke up one day to find him gone, his office empty, his home for sale. Months later I learned that he'd joined his wife! I almost died when he left me like that, without a word. But since then I've scourged myself plenty for the fool I was, and for trying to gain happiness for another's broken heart.

Wife Not to Blame

"This 'married lover' stuff is just a joke, and doesn't mean a thing but a lot of hooey and heartache. Can't Tressa see that if he really loved her, he'd move heaven and earth to marry her? Or, better yet, he'd leave her alone. If he were any good, he wouldn't have made love to her in the first place. And now he's only feeding his own colossal vanity and conceit. I've learned, too, that most wives are by no means as bad as they're painted. In my case, I found out the wife was a fine and lovely and devoted woman, who had overlooked his faults for years. And boy! I sure am glad things broke the way they did for me! I'm married now, to a real man, and I wonder what I ever saw in that one!"

And Yvonne writes:

"I've just read Tressa's letter and I want to tell her what happened to me . . . and the solution I've found. When I was 18, I met a most wonderful man (married) and he kept telling me that when his children were a little older he'd get a divorce, as he 'didn't care for his wife.' Well, several years slipped by and still it was the same old story. Then I began to realize what a fool I was. Although I loved him and felt he loved me, my pride came to the top and I began to feel ashamed of myself and to realize what I had been doing. So I decided to buck up and quit him—and I was afraid I'd fail in refusing to go back to him. But I stuck it out and now I'm happy, and glad I did.

"I have a wonderful husband, and we have two children. I don't think there is a better way of being happy and helping yourself than trying to make a happy home for a good man and babies.

"I thought I'd never forget my old beau, but he hardly ever comes into my mind any more. When he does I don't feel hard toward him, because I realize that I'd pictured an ideal in my mind and he happened to fit in, and I just let myself go. But I thank God that I've found a real love and the only one that counts . . . the sort of love that makes people consider each other. I'm so happy when my husband comes home, and I've noticed that it doesn't take long for him to get home from work, either. I'm trying hard to make my home a happy one for him and he appreciates it.

Can Win Happiness

"But don't get the idea that all men are self-centered. They're not. I didn't think any other man would want me, decently, after what happened, but I was wrong again because my husband dismissed from his mind all that I told him and has never mentioned it.

"I feel ashamed of myself every time I think of the time when I was willing to help break up a home. I wouldn't want anyone to do that to me. Remember you can say 'no' as easily as 'yes' when they ask you out, and remember men are sometimes like babies, too. They go as far as you'll let them. And sometimes they just want to see what a fool a girl is. But if they see you're serious, they usually come through O. K. Buck up, Tressa, and don't think it will break your heart to give this fellow up. It's hard. I know just how hard it is. But use your grit, and I'll promise you the return of your self-respect will be worth it many times over. I wish you all the luck in the world and I hope that one of these days you'll have a happy home like mine."

Household Hints

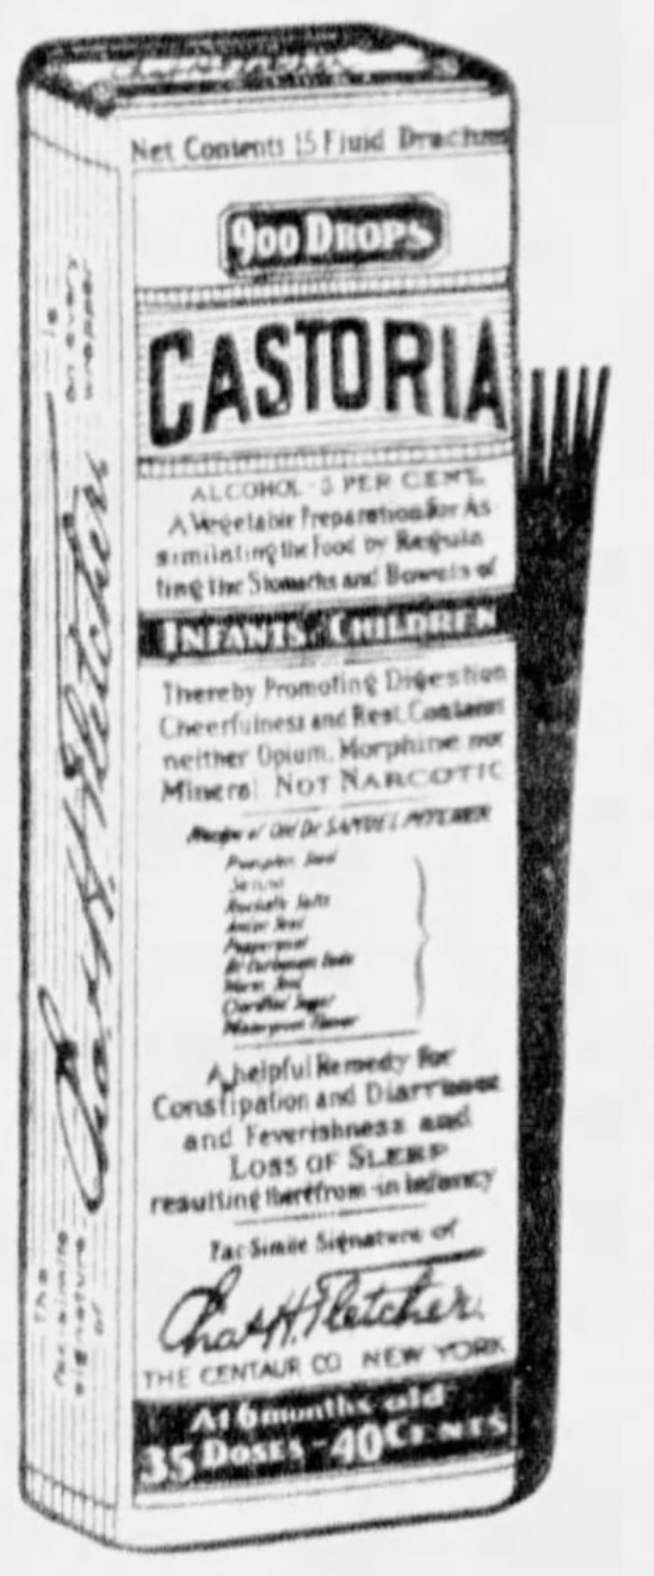
Place the stale rolls or bread in a brown paper bag. Then dampen the bag quite well and put into the oven until thoroughly heated through. The bread will be like newly baked.

A 10-cent heavy paper shopping bag is excellent to hang in the cellarway to hold odd bits of paper, paper bags and string. Then, in a hurry, you know just where to find wrappings for bundles.

A spring clothespin, fastened near the front door, is useful when the carrier arrives with the daily newspaper. He can snap it tight to keep the paper from blowing away.

It is a good idea to put small casters on the wooden box in which the children keep their toys. The box can then be pulled readily from place to place for play or pushed out of sight when not in use.

Can't PLAY
Can't REST
—child needs Castoria



WHEN a child is fretful and irritable, seems distressed and uncomfortable, can't play, can't sleep, it is a pretty sure sign that something is wrong. Right here is where Castoria fits into a child's scheme—the very purpose for which it was formulated years ago. A few drops and the condition which caused the trouble is righted, comfort quickly brings restful sleep.

Nothing can take the place of Castoria for children; it's perfectly harmless, yet always effective. For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an every-day aid. Its gentle action will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. In more liberal doses it will effectively help to regulate sluggish bowels in an older child.

All druggists have Castoria; it's genuine if you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature and this name-plate:

CASTORIA

A. M., and P. M.

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

That pretty young lady faring along cockily in the crisp air around the P. M. is the finished picture. But oh—she did not always look so ravishing and so sleek. The finished picture on the side-wall in the best light, one enchanting riot of color that makes so lovely a whole, clasping your gaze, dear to your picture-sense, was once an uncompleted, disorderly array. The thing was all there, in the artist's eye, but not assembled.

The picture in the A. M. is only in the making—beautiful in it's own way, perhaps, to the eye of the artist—and the lover—but all flying hither and yon. Tumbled hair, maybe curl-rags! One stocking on and one off. Heavy eyes—winking at the light of day. Big yawns. A slip of something on—just a slip!

Madge Is Elated at Dicky's Action

Nothing can be more annoying than efficiency when one does not want it. I realized that as Purnell darted to the telephone upon Mr. Seibel's desk as soon as he had given me the message from Dicky and spoke to the operator.

"Put Mister Graham right on hyah," he directed, and then with his chocolate face beaming, he held out the receiver to me with what we call a "Purnell obeisance."

I took it with a highly unjust mental malediction upon all enthusiastic darkeys, for I know Dicky's propensity to shout over the telephone when he is excited. I also know the carrying quality of his voice, and I was afraid that Mr. Veritzen might hear something which, to put it mildly, might wound his vanity.

"That you, Madge?" Dicky's voice, highly irritated, came over the telephone so clearly that I shivered apprehensively. "Hasn't that old peacock finished strutting around down there yet? If he hasn't, you'd better shunt him into the barnyard with the common fowls and get yourself up here. Your guests are here."

He slammed down the receiver, and I turned around in terror of Mr. Veritzen's possible wrath. But he was at the other end of the room with Mary beside him animatedly asking questions, which he was answering, a bit stiffly, it is true, but without rudeness. I hurried toward them and spoke hastily to Mary.

"Your uncle says our guests have arrived. We must run."

Secretly I shared his opinion, and hoped that Dicky was crying "Wolf." But it was too good an opportunity to escape from an embarrassing situation, and I seized my advantage firmly.

"I know that," I said smiling, "but I also know the impatience of boarding school girls. The guests from Mrs. Brixton's have no doubt arrived."

But it was not Helena Brixton whom I found in my living room when Mary and I had hurried upstairs. At first I thought Dicky purposely had deceived me. Then Edith Fairfax rose leisurely from a chair near the window and sauntered toward me. She was wearing an exquisite gown of green and white, a new one, in the latest mode, which I knew would make mine, of an earlier vintage, look positively old style. In her hand she held a florist's box of the kind which Mary and I had received.

"'Lo! Madge," she said carelessly. "I knew you wouldn't mind my coming up ahead of time and getting these fastened on. The ordinary taxi wasn't meant to take care of full evening costume 'mit posies.' I suppose this was originally the 'bride's bouquet' wasn't it, but now that you're going to be dutiful and wear Dicky's instead, I fall heir to it. Lucky me! I'll say."

Under her apparently friendly carelessness, I detected so much malice, even venom, that I shivered. She had sowed the seeds of what she hoped would be a quarrel between Dicky and me, when she had told him of Mr. Veritzen's gift of flowers to all the women of the party. And she was now ready to further the rift in any way she could.

I was determined not to give her an iota of information before I was compelled to do so. But I never made a greater effort than that which brought a friendly smile to my lips.

"Help yourself, Ede, to all the mirrors there are."

"You'd better freeze onto one or two yourself," Dicky said from the doorway of his room. "But I'll have to 'fess up, I suppose. I got you up here under false pretenses. No guests had arrived when I telephoned. But it was getting time for 'em, and I knew you'd have a hard time getting away from old Phil. That old boy sure likes to be thanked when he puts on a splurge. Ede, you should see the the blossoms he sent up to decorate that dining room. Enough to stock two or three ordinary florists' shops. How about yours and Mary's, Madge? Have they come yet? I'd like to see what the old goat sent you. There's one thing to be said for him. He has the best taste in all Manhattan."

My pulses were beating riotously as he finished for I knew that there was deliberate meaning behind every apparently idle word. He was taking my part against Edith Fairfax's attempt to make trouble between us, and was determined to make her look ridiculous.

Edith is past mistress of cosmetics, and her delicately rouged face did not change its color. But her voice was almost raucous as she said:

"But I have the bouquet Madge was to have, haven't I? Didn't you send her flowers for her sand-colored gown?"

Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Camomile tea is a sort of spiritual comfort to little dearhearts whose brain mats once golden are now drab; it brightens the glints. It doesn't give the solid-gold look of peroxide or the lemon-and-salts-of-tartar rinse. Fill a teaball with camomile leaves and let it stand in a quart of boiling water for two hours. Use as a final rinse for the shampoo. This herb was used before peroxide was ever heard of.

Noises create nerve fatigue; fatigue makes wrinkles. Women can't do much about city noises—traffic tooting, never ceasing radios, crying babies, rumblings of trains and street cars—but they can make their homes havens of peace and quiet. Laughter and song aren't noises. They're something different. Beautiful women make beautiful homes, beautiful homes make a beautiful world. Think of that, ducky!

Little Pale-face must bask in the sunshine. Basking can be done even in the winter time. Fling open a window and expose hands, face and arms to strong sunlight. Ultra violet rays are good friends to human folk. If you can't get the real ones, produced by Mister Sol, you can buy a lamp which produces an excellent substitute. A white skin is not a beautiful one, because it isn't healthy looking. Health happens to be fashionable right now.

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Teacup Tete-a-Tetes.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help me? I am invited to a tea. I think it will be more or less formal. I have never been to many teas and those I have been to set me in a panic.

Please tell me what to do, what to say and what to wear.

1. Is it customary to remove one's coat?

2. I will be a perfect stranger in this crowd and if someone doesn't come up and talk to me what must I do with myself? At receptions and teas that has always been a great problem to me . . . how to fill up GAPS.

READER.

Please don't be in a panic about your tea-manners, and your tea-psychology. I know just what you mean, for, it is true, I think, that one is very apt to feel more awkward in a crowd than when there are a few people present, when the occasion is, as at a dinner, more regulated as to seating arrangements and so forth. I think that the great thing to remember about going to a tea-party is to make up your mind that you will have at your tongue's end some few, at least, comments that are general enough to start the conversational ball a-rolling. Often tea-guests fear to start casual conversation from sheer self-consciousness, feeling that their remarks may be trivial and uninteresting. Small talk needn't be important . . . and it often leads, most charmingly and directly, to the exchange of more important ideas. So dash right in to the conversational pathway, and you will have a good time, and an unconscious one, before you know it.

To a tea wear your best-looking day clothes, your most formal street clothes.

1. Yes. Usually we leave our coats in the room assigned for this purpose.

2. You will find, at the tea-tables, hostesses who will give you tea and who will chat of "this and that." That is why they have been appointed co-hostesses, for this social duty of bringing people together, of introducing people who do not already know each other, and for performing other social amenities. Or, if they are busy, chat a minute with your hostess again, and she will introduce you to the people who are standing near her. Then begin at once, as I said in the beginning, to say something that will be a conversational lead. You see, if you let the conversation die down, then there is that awkward pause, and by that time, you may be left alone again.

Registering the Children.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please inform me the correct way to sign a hotel register when I register with my two sons, age 10 and 12? Also how my husband should register when we are all together?

J. R.

When you are traveling with such young children, it is not necessary to register them by name. This is all that is necessary:

Mrs. John Remington, San Francisco, and two children.

When you and your husband and the children are stopping at a hotel, your husband registers for all, like this:

Mr. and Mrs. John Remington, San Francisco, and two children.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Wednesday, March 11

Some definite headway may be expected on this day, according to the favoring position of Saturn in connection with Luna. This incites to patience, perseverance and hard work, bringing reward for merit, diligence and dependability. All of these qualities should be brought to bear on affairs in hand, especially in relation to employment and dealings with those in places of power.

Those whose birthday it is may find that the results of a year will depend largely on their individual efforts, with hard work, persistency and determination winning against much opposition and conflict. This applies especially to employment, though benefits may be expected from elders or old institutions. Real posessions may also bring some satisfaction.

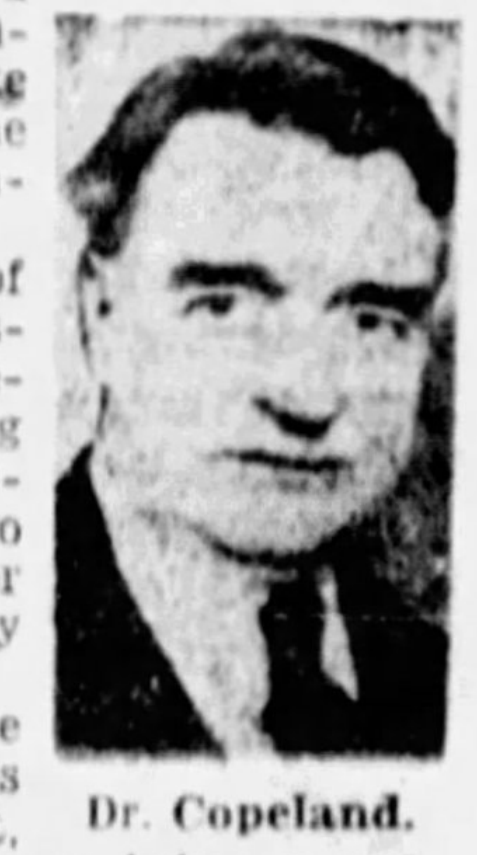
A child born on this day should be patient, persevering, practical and industrious and should win a measure of success through its individual merits, eliciting the favor of elders.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Erysipelas Is Usually Preceded by Infection

It is interesting to browse through the old text books on medicine. If you did this, you would in all probability run across a disease spoken of as "St. Anthony's Fire." It was greatly dreaded because it usually spread like fire from one person to another.



Dr. Copeland.

Because of this, the disease was regarded as being contagious. Today it is not so considered, nor is it frequently seen.

There are several forms of the ailment, the most common being a variety in which the skin is involved. This disease is always preceded by a wound, a scratch, or a break of the skin. This may have been very slight, and indeed may not have been noticed at all.

There is always sudden fever, with chill and intense local redness of the part involved. The original infection may be in the mouth, nostril, throat, ear, between the fingers or toes, at the margin of a nail, or in the folds of the skin itself.

Erysipelas is believed to be due to a certain germ called the "streptococcus." It spreads rapidly from one part of the body to another.

On the first or second day there is a redness of the skin. The redness spreads in patches. There are swelling and pain under the skin. These symptoms are followed by intense burning and itching.

About the fourth day the skin disturbance begins to disappear. After seven or eight days the patient shows signs of improvement.

This condition is spoken of as a self-limiting disease. Most cases speedily improve, requiring little medication. However, it is important that nursing care and medical attention be given to avoid any of the undesirable complictaions of erysipelas.

The diet should be nutritious but light. Water should be given in great amounts. If the fever is high the patient should be bathed and sponged frequently. Local applications are frequently applied, but all the treatment should only be given under the advice of a physician.

Step to End Holdout.
Giants Threaten Deal.
Other Clubs Unwilling.

Vance Compares Values.
Primo Inclined to Quit.
Repeating Cuyler Case.

NEW YORK OFFERS TERRY FOR TRADE

WHETHER IT IS only a bluff with the object of trying to scare the player into accepting the contract which he has thus far rejected, or the club management really would be willing to let him go on what the owners of rival outfits might consider reasonable terms, is something that can only be conjectured, but it is a fact that the bosses of the New York Giants are sounding out the other club heads in the National League on a deal for Bill Terry, the holdout first baseman.

Bill Terry

When a report came out that the New York club was willing to trade Terry to any other club in the Heydler loop except Chicago and was inviting proposals from the various organizations other than the Cubs, it was promptly scouted as only a lot of hokum started merely for publicity purposes and intended to have the effect of giving Terry the impression that the Giants meant to get rid of him if he did not speedily accept their latest salary offer.

HOWEVER, IT DEVELOPS that the New York club really has, from all appearances, placed Terry on the block, announcing its willingness to trade him to any club except Chicago, the Cubs being barred for the reason that it is figured the addition of another star of Terry's caliber would make the Bruins practically certain pennant winners. The Pittsburgh club, among others, it is understood, has been asked if it would be interested in making a trade for the Gotham first-sacker.

But, of course, even that doesn't prove that the Giant chiefs aren't trying to work a little game of bluff. For, like everybody else in baseball, they know they are perfectly safe in offering Terry in a trade and that there is no chance their proposal will be accepted by any club needing a first baseman. One reason is that every club knows the price asked for him would be prohibitive, and another is that no ordinary club is eager to burden its payroll in lean times with an additional athlete drawing a salary as large as Terry's.

LAST SEASON BILL drew a stipend of $18,000, and for this year he was offered an increase of 25 per cent, which would make his pay $22,500. But on the strength of the fact that he led the National League in hitting last year with an average of .401 and tied the league record for base hits, the first sacker is standing pat on a demand for a $30,000 salary and a three-year contract.

Few clubs are yearning to assume the added expense of a player with salary notions of that kind. One of the big money makers like Chicago or Brooklyn could pay it, but the Cubs are barred and the Robins have a satisfactory first baseman in Del Bissonette.

SO THE GIANT heads might as well be bluffing in their proposal to trade Terry, even if they are not, for it isn't likely that any of the clubs will be found willing to pay either the price New York would want for him or the salary the player himself would expect. There is no doubt that he is one of the most valuable players of all time and a hitter equal to the greatest, but to get him any club would have to give up so much in playing material as to wreck itself in another department. It's a good guess that the trouble will be adjusted eventually and that Terry will stay right with the Giants.

Dazzy Vance

MENTION OF TERRY and his worth to the club having him in its lineup brings to mind a point raised by another holdout, Dazzy Vance, of the Robins, as to the relative values of a great pitcher and a star in any other position.

Terry led the National League hitters last year and Vance led the pitchers in effectiveness. Terry has been offered $22,500 and demands $30,000. Vance also has been offered $22,500 and demands $25,000. Dazzy objects to the contention that Terry is the more valuable because he is at first base every day whereas Vance works only every fifth or sixth day.

"THERE'S ONE LITTLE point which few consider," Dazzy remarks. "Assume that I were pitching, that something happened to Bissonette and that the Brooklyn club had to send a high school kid to first base. If I were in good form that day there is no particular reason why I couldn't win the game.

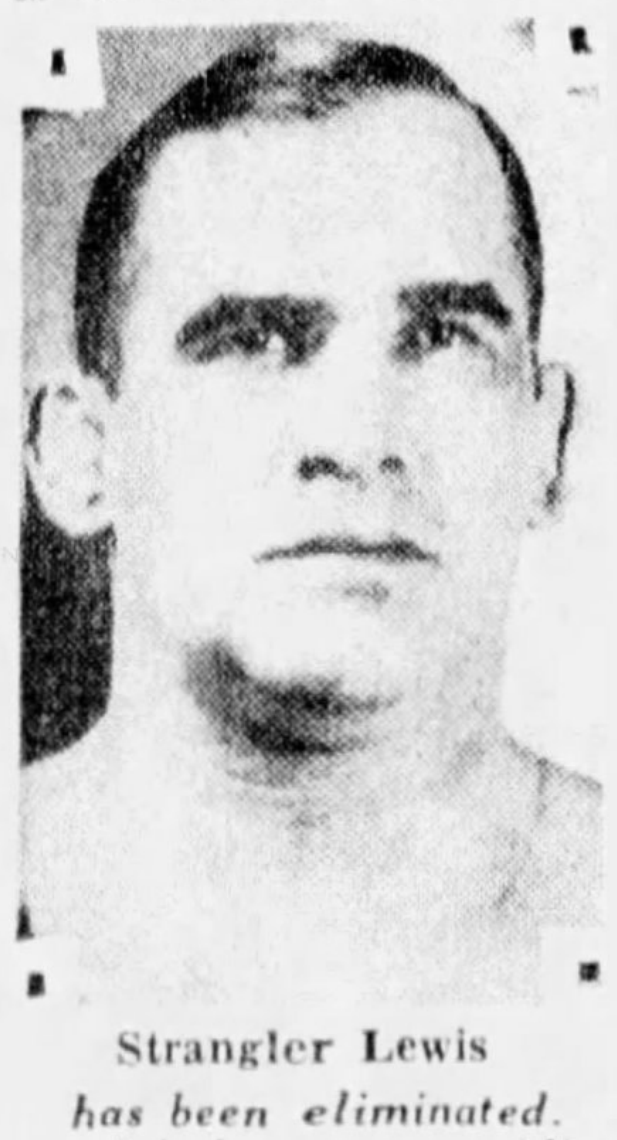
"Grant that the kid struck out every time up and made several errors—in other words, played a horrible game. The rest of the team might give me a flock of runs and keep the score down, with the result that I'd win.

"BUT IMAGINE THE Giants with Terry at first base and a high school kid in the box. Do you think the Giants would have the ghost of a show to win? Why, any major league club opposing them would have 100 runs before the nine innings were over. This is no attempt to belittle Terry, who, in my opinion, is one of he greatest all-around ball players the game has had in a couple of decades. But the point I want to bring out is that the pitcher, while he may not be able to work every day, is certainly the most important man on the ball field on the day he pitches."

EVEN IN A MATCH that had been specially arranged to make him look good, against an opponent whom he figured beyond question to defeat, Primo Carnera not only had trouble winning the decision, but it develops that he actually wanted to quit. Bill Corum reports that another scribe, Jack Kieran, who speaks French, and who was seated near Carnera's corner during the bout with Jimmy Maloney in Miami, overheard some interesting bits of conversation between Primo and his manager, M. Leon See, in the latter's native tongue.

Evidently Carnera was pretty thoroughly disgusted with things from the sixth round on and complained bitterly at his fate between sessions. "But," remonstrated See, "think of Maloney. Don't you think he is tired, too? Think of how you must have hurt him. But he's not complaining and wanting to quit. Go out there and stick your left hand out. Always the left. Always the left." Clearly, Primo was fed up on what was taking place and wanted to get away from it all. And he's the "logical challenger" they have picked to meet the winner of the Schmeling-Stribling bout for the world heavyweight championship.

A DISPATCH FROM the Cub camp says that "if Johnny Moore is an outfield regular when the bell rings, he will be the ideal man for the lead-off position in the batting order and Kiki Cuyler will then be placed in second position."



Strangler Lewis

Oh-oh! Look out for squalls. It was because he refused to bat second and openly defied Manager Bush that Cuyler, as a Pirate, placed himself in the situation that led to his being traded, and it will be interesting to observe how he takes it now if Rogers Hornsby tries the same move.

PERHAPS IT WAS because they finally discovered that it wasn't the best judgment in the world to bet on a wrestling match. Indeed it is hard to understand how they ever were carried away by such a child-like faith as to wager on such things in the first place. But Strangler Lewis, former champion, says it was heavy betting that ailed wrestling, and that the game is gaining in popularity now because that heavy betting has been eliminated. "There is a renewed interest in wrestling solely because gambling has been eliminated," Lewis says. "I don't mean entirely, but no large wagers are being laid. And I might add that unless the big-time gamblers are driven out of college football, that game will see itself going backward."

LOCALS PRIMED FOR BIG TEST TONIGHT

By CARL W. SHATTO

Local hockey interest will be at high tide tonight as the Yellow Jacket icemen attempt to take the highest and most treacherous hurdle remaining in their path to an International League championship play-off berth.

The lofty and tough hurdle is represented by the Cleveland Indians, and in steeplechasing circles it would be classed as a water jump, for just beyond the thorny hedge is the ditch of failure, a muddy expanse into which Detroit and Syracuse already have fallen. If the Jackets can "take" the Cleveland hurdle they are likely to clear the defeat ditch in the same leap and light on solid play-off ground. If they trip over the champions they are likely to be floundering around in the ditch of failure while the title series is being staged.

CRUCIAL TESTS

President-Manager Roy D. Schooley and Coach Charles Reid, jockeys who are lashing the Jackets on in their drive down the stretch, aren't enjoying the ride to any great extent right now because the London Tecumsehs, galoping on one game ahead, insist on kicking mud in their eyes. Well, in Windsor the Londoners also have a pretty tough hurdle to negotiate tonight, and if the Tecumsehs stumble, the play-off berth rivals may be running neck and neck tomorrow. The wire is only five games away, and the team that's ahead at the finish of this week's campaigning is likely to be ahead at the finish of the season.

Time was when the local skaters went out to battle the Indians with the single objective of making their traditional rivals very uncomfortable. Tonight the situation will be changed in that the Jackets won't care how the Indians feel so long as Pittsburgh wins. It used to be that Cleveland was THE bitter rival. Today every club remaining on the Pittsburgh schedule is a bitter rival. Desperation, born of the locals' perilous position, make all foemen look alike.

TEAMS IN SHAPE

Both teams are in fine condition for a furious fight. Leo Reise at last has clubbed an attack of tonsilitis into submission, and Albie Cox has an attack of flue so subdued that the mercury doesn't try to leap out of the tube every time a doctor pushes a thermometer into his mouth. Albie sported a temperature of 102 while guarding the Jacket cage in Windsor last Friday. With Reise it's just one ailment after another. A doctor treated a sore finger on his right hand yesterday. Both Albie and Leo will be in action tonight, however, and all other members of the Schooley squad are in top form.

The last time the Indians appeared here Doraty, their front line ace, had a crippled hand and Frew, a backfield stalwart, had a boil on his shoulder. Doraty and Frew now are back in A-1 condition, and their mates are feeling so well that they look like title favorites.

OLYMPICS NEXT

After finishing with the Indians, the Jackets will meet the Olympics in Detroit Thursday and the Syracuse Stars here Saturday. A Pittsburgh win tonight is likely to mean a Pittsburgh victory sweep for the week, and three straight triumphs are likely to give the Jackets a permanent spot within the money circle.

A capacity crowd is expected to witness this most crucial of a long string of crucial frays. The probable lineup:

Pittsburgh.		Cleveland.
Cox	G	Wood
Fraser	D	Young
Reise	D	McFarlane
Rodden	C	Gray
McCurry	W	Dunning
Gregg	W	Brophy

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

BILOXI, Miss., March 9.—All the teams are coming along nicely in the South, and they will be ready to do their stuff just as soon as the spring thaw melts those hockey rinks in the North.

Nick Altrock

There are couple of holdouts still trying to convince the magnates they can make a better living tending to a milk route than playing ball for a measly salary.

I see Connie Mack is standing pat with his Athletics this year. Well, our club has only got to fill a four-flush and we will give Connie a run for his chips. It gets kind of monotonous seeing the A's finish every season in alphabetical order.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: BOBBY JONES LOST 16 POUNDS PLAYING IN THE AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP—Most authorities on athletics maintain that participants in championship golf tournaments undergo greater mental and physical strain than any athlete in any other branch of sport. A championship tournament lasts many days and usually take place during the hottest season of the year, which, combined with nervous strain, unfailingly acts as a weight reducer. EDWARD W. BERRY, THE DEGREELESS DEAN—Berry was graduated from Passaic High School, in 1890. Later he studied geology apart from any school curriculum, and, as a result of his practical knowledge of geology, he was called upon to decide a dispute about the formation in Raritan Bay. Thereafter he was appointed an associate to Prof. Clark, head of the Geology Department at Johns Hopkins University, whose chair he was given after Prof. Clark's death in 1918. RALPH SALSTEIN THREW 11 BALLS TO A BATTER BEFORE FANNING HIM—With two out and a man on first, Salstein threw three balls and two strikes to the batter and then caught a runner off first. In the next inning, the same batter was up and Salstein threw him three balls and three strikes, the batter not swinging at any of them.

TOMORROW: THE HOLY ROLLER.

SWETONIC HURT NOT SERIOUS

Steve Swetonic, injured Pirate pitcher, will be as good as ever when he rejoins the Pittsburgh club, according to Dr. G. F. Berg, in whose care the North Side hurler was placed upon his arrival from the Paso Robles training camp.

After taking some additional X-ray pictures of Swetonic's ailing arm, Dr. Berg said today that he would perform a minor operation on Steve's elbow tomorrow morning at St. John's Hospital, North Side, for the removal of a small sliver of bone.

The doctor expressed the opinion that Swetonic would be required to remain in the hospital not longer than one week. He said he expected the very best results from the removal of the bone sliver and that the pitcher's arm would mend rapidly.

Rookie Tales

NO. 2—DUTCH GEISSBERGER.

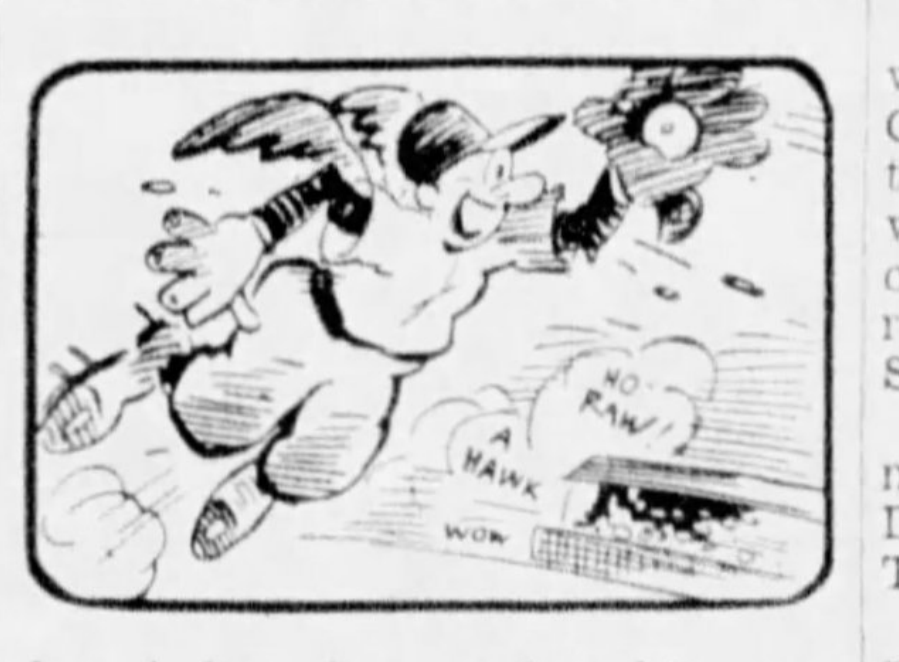
PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 10. — When a lad lives within a few squares of a famous ball park, that boy is likely to get the sport into his blood about the same time his fond parents have started him off to school. Harry Ignatius (Dutch) Geissberger hardly had started in on Readin', Ritin' and Rithmetic before he fell a victim to the lure of waiting outside Recreation Park, San Francisco, for foul balls.

Harry Geissberger

The appealing kid, sent to the Pirate training camp by Joe Cronin and Joe Devine, is only 18, yet his baseball career dates back 10 years to the time he, with scores of neighborhood youngsters, would tarry outside the Seals' park for foul drives that came over the fence in batting practice.

And if Dutch turns out to be a fast base-runner in the great game, he may look back to the days when he outran the guards whose duties it was to return the balls to the playing field.

The San Francisco owners had men stationed on two adjacent streets where many balls would fall during a batting session. They also employed another man to ring a bell whenever a rocket left the park. Of course, the kids knew this signal and in their innocence thought it quite O. K. to grab up an over-the-fence ball and then make tracks to elude the guards. The fleeter lads could get away with the stunt and they would keep the neighborhood teams in good baseballs. Geissberger was one of the boys who could turn the trick and now, as he nears manhood, he continues to be a ball hawk.



Both Cronin and Devine think Harry will be a much-sought-after shortfielder for the major league play before he reaches his majority. He comes from the same section of San Francisco that has given the major leagues a score or more of stars. Golden Gate Park is dotted with fine baseball diamonds and on its spacious stretches have been developed boys like Cronin, Eddie Montague, Tony Lazzeri, Frank O'Doul, Babe Pinelli, George Kelly, Mark Koenig and Sammy Bohne.—CHARLES J. Duquesne University's passers wind up their season against Grove City College at Grove City tonight. Three Bluff floor stars will be ringing down the curtain on their collegiate basketball careers—Ganzy Benedict, Capt. Brud Stephens and Snabs Parry.

Dave Wilder, former Fifth Avenue High lad, has another year to play for the Dukes and will be the nucleus around which Coach Davies must work to build a new combination next year.

Geneva Victor

Geneva scored a sensational rally last night to defeat Carnegie Tech, 31-27, and thereby put a gloomy end to one of the most successful floor seasons in the annals of Skibo basketball.

Checked in the closing minutes, after having put up a splendid game, Capt. George Nease, of Carnegie, tried in vain to halt the Genevans. Carnegie held an 18-12 advantage at half-time.

After having trailed 24-21 late in the game, Carnegie pulled up to level the score at 25-all with a matter of minutes remaining to end matters. At this point the Covenanters held the Tartans to a lone field goal, by Montgomery, the while making enough points to cop handily.

The Lineup

By JESS CARVER

The heroes of one of the tourney's most exciting games, Scottdale's Blue and White clad Section X entry, returns to the wars tonight, opposing a foe of the most formidable proportions. Scottdale engages Johnny Reed's Scott High, North Braddock five, in a second round, upper bracket W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination game in the Pitt Stadium.

It will be a long time before those who witnessed Scottdale's one-point triumph over Brownsville in the first round will forget that battle. A field goal, scored on an intercepted pass by Rush, Scottie center, in the last five seconds of play, enabled Scottdale to rub out Brownsville.

SCOTT FAVORED

Scott had little difficulty in sliding through its first round tussle. The Reedmen walloped Dunbar, in the only first round game not staged here in the Stadium. The game was played in Greensburg.

North Braddock's crack array, generally regarded as the tourney favorite, is the choice over Scottdale tonight. Scott figures to have too much all-around class for Scottdale, although the scrappy attitude of the Section Teners and the ability of Eicher, star forward, to sink field goals, makes the team a dangerous opponent.

Bravo! Ken-Hi

It is written in the books, with indelible ink that a New Kensington High School basketball team is never beaten until the ball game is over. You may be out in front by 10 or a dozen points, possibly with only a couple minutes left to play, but you haven't the boys beaten.

New Brighton was spinning along with a 10-point lead over the defending champions in a second round, W. P. I. A. L. championship elimination game in the Pitt Stadium last night. The score was 30 to 20, and New Brighton appeared to be clicking, while Kensington was not.

Then Brighten grew careless. Instead of playing carefully, both for time and set shots, they heaved 'em wild and far, tried to punch the ball through Kensington's potent defense and generally took the situation too lightly. What was the result? Why, Babe Dayoub and Whitey Wilson, Kensington's fine pair, broke loose with a scoring barrage that never let up until the score was tied, and then went on to win out in two extra periods of play, 33 to 32.

LATE RALLY WINS

The count was 30-18 when Kensington broke loose. Resliet started it all with his only goal of the game. Then Wilson dropped in two in rapid succession and Dayoub added one of his own making to the collection. Wilson popped another, and the score was 30-28 and just two seconds before the gun. Dayoub got his hands on the ball under the hoop and in it went, for the tie.

Neither team counted in the first extra period, although New Brighton lost a chance to win when Alexander blew a foul. In the second overtime session, Tom Hurley, who played one of the most brilliant individual games in the history of the tournament, sent one soaring for the hoop from PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 10.—It's double duty for those Pirates today. Ringmaster Ens expects to stage a regulation ball game this afternoon, this to follow the morning drill.

Ens last night received a telegram from Paul Waner, the message stating Brother Paul expected to be in camp Friday. The rightfielder also stated he was in fine shape, his words being somewhat of a puzzle to the boss, inasmuch as Paul only recently was discharged from a hospital.

BIRD INJURES TOE

Aside from minor injuries, the health of the big squad is excellent. Catcher Joe Bird suffered a toe injury yesterday when a batted foul crashed against him while he caught in batting practice. The wound will keep Joe comparatively inactive for a day or two. Bill Regan, who turned an ankle about a week ago, is making fine progress. Bill may be able to get back into a uniform before the club leaves the camp.

Ens expects to see two pitchers finish for each side this afternoon. He will make his regular selections from three righthanders, Brame, Spencer and Bednar. Bivin and Kennedy will divide the work for the Yans. Hemsley and Phillips will catch for the first team, with Finney and Mealey doing backstop duty for the kids.

The Skipper figures his pitchers have reached a point in conditioning where they can go about half the distance. The marvelous baseball weather still continued through yesterday, with the squad enjoying the benefits of another long drill in the sun.

PIE HITS WELL

Ens has whipped the first-string infield into fine condition. Pie Traynor looks as good, or better, than before, with the exception of a sore arm. Pie cannot get his regular stuff on his overhand throws, but he is hitting in a fierce manner.

The infield, as a whole, is a source of deep satisfaction to Ens. Jewel is especially delighted with the form shown in fielding and hitting by Shortstop Tommy Thevenow.

MANOS, SMITH WIN EASILY

Theos Manos, city singles champ, and Frank Smith, of K. A. C., defeated Chersky and Wolfe, Y. M. H. A., 21-12 and 21-19, in the opening matches of the city doubles handball championship on the Keystone Athletic Club courts yesterday.

An extra-session game was caused when Lapidus and Fierst, Y. M. H. A., forced Davies and Myers, Y. M. C. A., to the limit before admitting defeat, the scores being 6-21, 21-7 and 21-19.

Olbum and Goldstein, Y. M. H. A. eliminated Earren and Fitch, unattached, 21-13, and 21-20, while Sharp and Smith, Y. M. C. A., defaulted to Altman and Alman, Y. M. H. A.

The Manos-Smith combination takes on Davies and Myers, while Olbum and Goldstein oppose Clarke and Bialas, P. A. A., today.

SCOTT BATTLES SCOTTDALE

the middle of the floor. The ball hit the rim and bounded off, but Beitsch, Brighton center, tapped it in. That goal looked like the ball game. There remained only a minute to play.

In scrimmage in the middle of the floor, Susek was fouled. He made good, to put his team within a point of another tie. The ball went back to center, and on the tapoff, Brighton obtained possession, but lost it when Wilson effected a heldball. On the jump he tapped to Dayoub, sped down the floor and took a fast pass at the foul circle. His shot was true and straight in it went and with it a great victory.

BRIGHTON LEADS

The teams both started fast, New Brighton holding a 4-0 lead midway through the first period, but three fine goals by Babe Dayoub enabled Kensington to lead at 7 to 5 at the end of the quarter. They were tied at the half at 12-all.

New Brighton had a big moment or two in the third period and apparently had the ball game safely on the ice. Going into the final period the boys were ahead by eight points at 23 to 15.

Then came the splendid New Kensington rally in the dying moments of the last period, which amounted to a 15-point splurge and the two extra sessions and the game.

Hurley's great performance would have been the game's feature had it not been for Kensington's eleventh hour rally. He gave a convincing demonstration of the proper way to play basketball.

A year ago, to get into the semifinal round, New Kensington came from behind, tied the score with a rally such as it pulled out of the bag last night and then fought through four extra periods to win.

Teams still in the running may as well become reconciled to the fact that as long as Whitey Wilson and Babe Dayoub are in the ball game for New Kensington, New Kensington is also. Forewarned is forearmed. The lineup:

N. Kensington—33		New Brighton—32
Wilson (C)	F	(C) Hurley
Reisliet	F	Maybray
Dayoub	C	Beitsch
Susek	G	Alexander
Bell	G	Steinfield

Score by periods—

New Kensington	7	5	3	15	0	3—33
New Brighton	4	8	11	7	0	2—32

Field goals—Hurley 5, Maybray 3, Beitsch 4, Alexander, Steinfield, Wilson 6, Reisliet, Dayoub 6. Fouls—Hurley 2 out of 3; Maybray 1 out of 1; Beitsch 0 out of 2; Alexander 1 out of 4; Wilson 4 out of 5; Reisliet 3 out of 6; Dayoub 2 out of 2; Susek 2 out of 6; Bell 0 out of 2.

Team fouls—New Kensington 7 out of 16, New Brighton 4 out of 10.

Time of periods—8 minutes. Two 3-minute overtime periods.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

An eleventh-hour substitute, a 10-to-3 shot in the betting, upset the dope to beat a highly-touted opponent in the main bout of 10 rounds at Motor Square Garden last night.

It was none other than ol' Steve (Himself) Smith, the Bridgeport (Conn.) Iron Man, who turned the trick, and his victim was Johnny Datto, Cleveland Filipino. Datto was slated for his third meeting with Jackie Rodgers, local Negro puncher, who pulled out of the match last Friday because of an injured rib. Jackie probably is kicking himself around the block today for passing up the chance to be in there with Datto last night.

DATTO HURTS HAND

The Datto of last night was nothing like the Datto who twice took Rodgers' measure within the last 10 weeks. Instead, he was like the Datto who messed his way to defeats by Andy Martin and Joey Thomas in other engagements here. Right in the first round he jammed up his bad right hand on the iron head of Iron Steve, and from then on he didn't have a chance. He seldom used the right, and, when he did, he purposely tossed it wide around Smith's iron fist-demolishing hat rest or dropped it into the soft part of the body or "pulled" it when it found the chin. In short, he was a one-fisted fighter, and his right always has been his one best bet.

Meanwhile, ol' Steve made hay while the lights shone over the ring and helped himself to a glorious and gluttonous evening.

LOOKS BAD AT START

Throughout the first few rounds, before it was definitely established that Datto was fighting under the handicap of a useless right hand, it looked for all the world like one of those things. With Datto merely tapping with his left, and missing with the right when he used it at all, it appeared as if he was "carrying" along a poor substitute fellow for a little while to let him make a showing and give the customers a run for their money. But when he failed to show any improvement as he went along and Steve began to put more and more zest into his work, it took on the markings of the real stuff and just a bad night at sea for the Filipino.

This fellow Smith, in addition to being a rugged "taker," is a good "giver" when he gets a chance to be on the shooting end. He never stopped forcing the fighting and throwing gloves and he did his best work in the clinches, where he mauled and hauled and jolted away with both fists to his heart's content, with Datto unable to tie him up or fight him off.

FILIPINO SHELLACKED

Steve's right eye was cut in the third round and discolored thereafter, but this was the only mark of distress he bore. Datto, on the other hand, was bleeding plentifully from the nose and mouth and had a lump raised on his back that looked like a protruding rib. Datto managed to keep the going fairly close in the first five rounds, but simply went through the motions and took a bad shellacking in the last five. Smith, at 129½ pounds, had a five-pound edge in the weights at 3 p. m.

Mickey Duris, of Johnstown, 141, handed out a neat lacing to Billy Holt, Negro, of Homewood, 145, in the eight-round semi-final, although he was dropped for a count of eight with a left hook to the chin in the fifth round and had his left eye so badly cut in the seventh that the commission doctor was called into the ring to examine it before the start of the final session. Duris was handled by Jimmy Dunn, his new manager.

Joey Spiegel, Uniontown southpaw, won by a technical knockout over Bobby Ray, of the Hill, 139, after 2 minutes 40 seconds of the fifth round, when the referee called a halt as Ray jumped up at the count of two after the only knockdown. Ray, who had been outboxed all of the way, wanted to continue, but he was limping and the referee refused to pay any attention to his request.

TERRY WANER WINS

Terry Waner, of the North Side, 131, subbing on short notice for Joey Katkish, of Lawrenceville, came from behind to defeat Al Farone, of the West End, 129, in the six-round opener.

Dominick Petrone, New York featherweight, now making his home here, was introduced before the main bout and it was announced Eddie Brannon, of the Hill, and Cowboy Eddie Anderson, of Wyoming, will box a return bout in the windup next Monday night. The house was good, considering the substitution in the main bout.

Red Robinson and Joe Keally alternated as referees and Frank Brown and L. K. Meininger were the judges. Harry Klaas did the anouncing and A. C. Couch and Norman Borland handled the timing.

Another capacity crowd is in prospect for the second benefit amateur boxing show for the needy of the Thirteenth Ward under the auspices of the Homewood-Brushton Boosters' Club and the Thirteenth Ward Regular Republican Organization in the Moose Temple, downtown, tonight. The arena was oversold for the initial show and tonight's card was arranged to take care of the fans who were disappointed on that occasion.

The Benny Touchstone-Frankie Simms return bout, so often postponed, has been rebooked for Thursday night at Ypsilanti, Mich.

Dominick Petrone, veteran featherweight, of New York, who is here to box under the management of his cousin, Frank Petrolia, of the Schenley Park free links staff, is keen to land a match with Jackie Rodgers. He has begun road work in Schenley Park and will get down to gym tricks within a few days and will be at his best for bouts inside of three weeks.

The local wrestling situation is becoming more complicated. With Young Eppy, Charley Reinecke and their partners, Maurice Fishman and Boo Boo Hoff, of Philadelphia, due to get their permit to operate on Wednesday and planning their first show for March 25, with Jim Londos in the main bout, one Arthur F. Sharkey, of Atlantic City, is in town for a conference today with Boxing Commissioner Harvey Boyle with reference to beating the syndicate to the punch and staging his first show on St. Patrick's night, one week from tonight. Both clubs plan to operate in Motor Square Garden if they receive licenses to go ahead.

Jimmy Thomas, local Negro bantamweight, who boxes Benny Schwartz, of Baltimore, in the main bout at the Moose Temple, Friday night, is matched with Vito Mazzeo for a six-round windup in Cleveland, March 23.

Joe Marciente, New York featherweight, is in town seeking battles. He has boxed many of the stars in the East and in Canada and last Thursday night whipped Jackie Stewart in Cincinnati.

Hans Roberts is ill and Ray Lyle, of Akron, will take his place against Young Rady in the 10-round main bout of a show at East Liverpool, O., tonight.

Jimmy Johnston, New York promoter, announces he is working on a Primo Carnera-Jack Sharkey bout for the New York district in July or August. Meanwhile Sharkey has under consideration an offer of $60,000 to box Paul Swiderski at the Oklahoma City baseball park, May 29.

Landis Denies Reds Local Outfield Star

TAMPA, Fla., March 10.—Retirements from baseball are likely to cost the Reds two good players.

The Reds traded Johnny Gooch, former Pittsburgh catcher, to Baltimore for Frank Rodgers, of Pittsburgh, outfielder. Commissioner K. M. Landis set aside the trade when Gooch retired. The Reds then failed in an attempt to buy Rodgers' release, but Baltimore agreed to send him to Peoria, a Red camp, where he will continue his training with Cincinnati. Gooch has been offered a Red contract at the same salary which Baltimore offered him.

The Reds traded Marty Callahan and Pat Crawford to Hollywood for Mickey Heath. Crawford has retired, and the Reds fear they will lose Heath just as they lost Rodgers.

AL BROWN WINS

MANCHESTER, England, March 10.—(AP.)—Panama Al Brown, world bantamweight champion, won a technical knockout victory over Willie Farrell, English boxer, in the third round of a scheduled 15-round match here last night. Brown weighed 122½ pounds, one-half pound over his matched weight and lost a forfeit he had posted.

Needing one victory to clinch the Allegheny County League championship for the fifth straight season, the Duquesne Lafayettes are on edge for their battle with the Fintex passers at the South Side Market House tonight. The Lafayettes won the first contest with points to spare and if they show the same form tonight a third game will not be necessary.

Fintex, despite its miserable showing in the opening clash of the season, still has hopes of extending the engagement to three games by winning tonight. Both teams report their regulars in shape. The contest should draw a large crowd to the Market House, the home floor of the Fintex team.

Frank Stansbury takes his Community House passers to Foresters Hall in Lawrenceville to engage the Knickerbockers, the Hoyles play at the North Side Buicks and St. Michael's play at the Schneiders in the three West Penn League games carded tonight.

Faith Chapel Juniors play at First Presbyterian Juniors in a Junior Church League game, while the Forresters are at B. & O. in the Greater Pittsburgh League.

Although the club owners turned down the offer, Caron and Lalonde still hope to swing a deal whereby the franchise will be transferred to Cleveland.

BELLEFIELDERS FAVORED TO COP TITLE

The Lineup

Schenley.		South Hills.
Cates	F	Currie
Schmidt	F	Metz
Crum	C	Dering
Mihm	G	Regan
Friedman	G	Rigg

Referee—Cal Bolster. Umpire—Al Slack.

Unless South Hills is able to show an almost complete reversal of form over that displayed last Friday, the annual series for the City League championship is going to reach an abrupt termination this afternoon as the Tunnelites face Schenley in the second game of the series on the Pitt Stadium floor.

Schenley, champions of Section I, doubled the score on South Hills Friday, 28 to 14. The game was close during the first half, but in the last two periods, Schenley pulled away, winning easily. South Hills had some tough luck with its shots, but found Crum and Joe Mihm a tough combination to stop.

The Bellefielders gained the title round by defeating Westinghouse in a play-off game for the Section I title. Fifth Avenue represented Section I last year and won the league title, for the third year in a row. South Hills has represented Section II for the last four years, but has been unable to muster sufficient strength to annex the league crown.

Will Industry or Politicians Tackle Idle?

—By B. C. FORBES

Mr Forbes

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S veto of Senator Wagner's bill to have the federal government go fifty-fifty with the states in providing funds to deal with the unemployed must not be interpreted by industry as meaning that the whole question of governmental action will now be dropped.

The only thing which could possibly avert governmental activity would be a convincing demonstration that industry itself is willing and able to handle the problem effectively. And perhaps industry has already waited too long.

AMERICAN INDUSTRY'S attitude toward throwing workers idle and leaving them to shift for themselves has long been inexplicable. During the Coolidge boom I repeatedly sounded warnings that unemployment would become the major economic problem of this country, and I did everything in my feeble power to arouse corporation executives from their apparent indifference.

At one time I sponsored a conference at Washington in the hope of bringing together our largest employers to consider ways and means of instituting co-operative action. The response was utterly disappointing.

THE CHARGE constantly is made, both by foreigners and by Americans, that our businessmen are concerned solely with moneymaking, that they are hardboiled, selfish, mercenary, blind to anything and everything outside their daily moneymaking activities.

Yet, with few exceptions, industrial and other business leaders have all along failed to look ahead and plan ahead concerning the handling of the widespread unemployment which they should have known loomed ahead.

"IF INDUSTRY does nothing to take care of its unemployed, politicians will."

That warning has been sounded time and again by the writer. It was sounded long before the panic occurred—a panic which was easily foreseen as inevitable. Articles and editorials galore were written urging that the biggest business brains of America get together to organize an institute of industrial co-ordination, or some such body, to study how to level out peaks of prosperity and valleys of depression, and also to set up machinery for coping with unemployment.

But most leaders remained deaf and blind. They were so engrossed in their own affairs that they did not realize the gravity of what lay ahead.

TRUE, A FEW corporations ultimately awakened to the dire need of doing something to meet their own unemployment problems. Relatively little was done before the panic. But these isolated instances of individual action were not accompanied by a nationwide get-together by our brainiest men of affairs with a view to co-ordinated action.

An excellent illustration of the consideration exercised by some of our more humane enterprises is the action taken by International Harvester, as described thus by Vice President Cyrus McCormick:

"It must indeed be hard for self-respecting Americans who want to work to accept charity. It must be encouraging to a man who has lost his job through no fault of his own to learn that he has not been forgotten and that he can have his job back again as soon as business picks up. That is the message that the International Harvester Company has sent to unemployed Harvester men. It wants them to go on holding their heads high, feeling that they have a place in the economic sun.

"Whenever a regular Harvester man is in need of help because he is out of work or because his earnings have been severely reduced by part-time operations, we lend him the money to carry him through, sufficient to keep regular Harvester men out of the bread lines."

BUT STEPS by a few corporations cannot and will not solve the problem nationally. Congress will not resume until December. It is up to American industrial and business leaders to convince the public before then that they are co-operating closely, earnestly, aggressively and effectively to solve the problem.

Or, if they are content to do little or nothing, they must be prepared for political action. Admittedly, this is more of an economical than a political problem, and surely it could better be handled by capital and labor than by politicians.

Handled it will be, if not by one then by the other.

STEEL BACKLOG DECREASES

NEW YORK, March 10.—(AP.)—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation decreased 167,157 tons in February to a total of 3,965,194 tons February 28. In January an increase of 188,755 tons was reported.

The backlog as of January 31 was 4,132,351 tons. On December 31 unfilled orders aggregated 3,943,596 tons. November 30 the unfilled tonnage was 3,639,636, and February 29, 1930, unfilled orders amounted to 4,479,748 tons.

A decrease was expected in financial circles because of the rise in operations during February and the smaller number of business days in that month for buying. It was pointed out that consumers apparently were awaiting definite indications of the spring trend before placing orders.

MOTOR TRADE GAIN STARTED

NEW YORK, March 10.—Marked improvement in sales and employment by General Motors in Europe was reported today by James D. Mooney, vice president of General Motors Corporation and president of General Motors Export Company, upon his return from a business trip in Europe. Mr. Mooney pointed out that the downward sales in effect since last June had been checked in December with a substantial rise occurring each month since.

William J. McAneeny, president and general manager of Hudson Motor Car Company, said:

"I see definite signs of improvement in the automobile industry. This improvement is more pronounced in the East than elsewhere. A seasonal peak stock of cars is being approached in preparation for anticipated spring and summer business. Our dealers and distributors are anticipating a good business."

Coal Companies Report Losses for 1930

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

LITTLE HOPE FOR IMPROVEMENT in the coal industry was shown by the annual reports of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation, the leading operators in this district. Both companies reported deficits for 1930. With the exception of a negligible profit in 1929 the Pittsburgh Coal Company has operated at a loss since 1924. Pittsburgh Terminal Coal has been in red ink since 1926.

Pittsburgh Coal reported a net loss for the year of $1,078,695 after deducting interest, depreciation, depletion and all other charges. This compared with a net profit of $15,592 in 1929 and with losses of $493,871 in 1928, $1,880,597 in 1927 and $2,114,677 in 1926.

From the standpoint of comparison with previous years, Pittsburgh Terminal made a better showing. This organization reported net loss of $642,945 after deducting interest, depreciation, depletion, amortization and other charges. This compared with losses of $696,527 in 1929, $893,003 in 1928 and $953,640 in 1927.

Coal Problems Severe

THE COAL INDUSTRY faced even more difficult problems last year than other types of business. Declining demand and lower prices resulted from the general depression. These were a heavy burden on companies which had been unable to show profits under the favorable business conditions prevailing in earlier years.

Since 1924, coal companies in this district have had more than their share of troubles. Early in 1925 the Pittsburgh companies found themselves burdened with a wartime union wage scale while producers in West Virginia and Kentucky with nonunion workers had reduced wages and prices to such an extent that Pittsburgh's margin of profit had been eliminated.

Labor Troubles Started

PITTSBURGH COAL TRIED to solve the problem by shutting down all its mines, disregarding its wage agreement and then resuming operations on a nonunion basis, Pittsburgh Terminal Coal continued to pay the union scale until the expiration of its wage agreement. It then cut wages. The costs to both operators and miners of the resultant strike, which has never been officially settled, are only too well known.

While Pittsburgh district operators can now get all the miners they need at their own prices, all their problems have not been solved. Further wage cuts in other districts have prevented mines in the vicinity of Pittsburgh from establishing operations on a profitable basis. Lengthy struggles for more favorable freight rates have not been sufficiently successful to restore lost markets to Pittsburgh coal producers.

Mechanizing Mines

IN VIEW OF THE DECLINE of 13.7 per cent in total bituminous coal production and further weakness in prices, the results of the two companies show that progress is being made in solving some of the more important problems. Both organizations have been making efforts to reduce costs by the installation of new equipment to reduce the amount of labor required to produce coal. In addition they have been making use of cleaning plants to prepare a better product for the market.

Pittsburgh Coal states that the reduction in prices was nearly offset by reduced costs in mines. The net results of mine operations showed only slight decreases from 1929, but subsidiary companies suffered from loss in business due to decreased activity in the Great Lakes market territories.

Coal loaded mechanically by this company doubled in 1930 over 1929 and the tonnage handled by the four cleaning plants was 62 per cent of the total production in the Pittsburgh district as compared with 43 per cent in 1929.

Pittsburgh Terminal Coal completed a Chance sand floatation cleaning plant at mine No. 8 in January, 1931. The use of this plant will be reflected in the current year's operations.

"The outlook for the year 1931 is uncertain and improvement in the condition of the coal industry depends mainly on a revival of general business."

POWER GROUP LEADS STOCK ADVANCE

Broad List of Industrials And Merchandisings Gain: Steel Up Despite Report

Shares of the United Corporation Electric Power group were bid up vigorously, in response to the formal announcement of the long reported power hookup between New York Edison and Niagara Hudson.

A board assortment of industrials, led by American Can, was carried higher, joined by several of the merchandising issues and specialties. U. S. Steel's unfilled tonnage, showing somewhat more than the moderate decline expected, caused more short covering than liquidation.

Although the market failed to lost its highly professional flavor and bulls continued to find their campaign decidedly uphill work, professional traders were inclined to the view that the upside was relatively the more promising.

Among the more encouraging items in the day's budget of news was the favorable reception accorded bond offerings amounting to nearly $200,000,000. A more favorable steel tonnage report wouldh ave been appreciated but with March well under way, Wall Street scarcely hopes for anything very impressive in the way of steel mill activity before the autumn seasonal upturn.

Some observers have been inclined to the view that market operators are anxious to accomplish considerable distribution of holdings before the first quarter earnings statements appear. It is now obvious that many companies will fail to break even in this period. President Minniger of Electric Autolite spoke of new operating economies in the annual report, and looked for a good showing. On the other hand, Mack Truck management said the first quarter will undoubtedly result in a substantial deficit.

Money continued firm, reflecting Treasury withdrawals to meet soldier bonus checks and other influences. Call money renewed at 2 per cent, the first time a higher renewal rate than 1½ had been posted since January 2, when loans renewed at 3. After midday, however, outside funds were offered at 1½.

IMPORTANT OIL RULING MADE

LOS ANGELES, March 10—Judge Leon R. Yankwich has rendered a decision in Superior Court here in favor of Texas Company relative to curtailment of production of leased property. It is one of the most important rulings affecting the oil industry that has been decided by a California court in recent years.

The substance of the decision is that under oil leases giving the lessee absolute control of operation of properties the lessee has the right to curtail production although it reduces the owner's income.

The decision is the result of a suit brought by Texas Company to determine landowner's rights to enforce compliance with a lease contract calling for maximum operation of the lease contrary to the state-wide curtailment agreement to which the oil company is pledged. The property involved consists of a 40-acre lease held by Texas Company in the Poso Creek field.

Salaries Cut by Fisk Rubber Co.

CHICOPEE, Mass., March 10—The Fisk Rubber Company has reduced salaries of all executives and office employes approximately 10 per cent, effective March 1, it was announced today. Intimation was given that the factory employes might share in the reduction.

Calumet President Opposes Merger

NEW YORK, March 10—Gordon R. Campbell, president of Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, is soliciting proxies of those opposed to the merger with Phelps Dodge Corporation.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, March 10—Influenced by bullish aspects of government figures on farm reserve supplies, grains averaged higher early today and especially corn. Unexpected firmness of Liverpool wheat quotations and smallness of receipts at European continental centers were an additional strengthening factor. Opening unchanged to ½ cent up, corn afterward rose all around.

Wheat started at ¼ decline to ¼ advance, and subsequently hardened.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Raw sugar was firmer today with spot prices 1/8 of a cent higher at 3.25c for spots duty paid. Outport refiners showed interest at this level although local refiners as yet have not been inclined to pay the higher price. The only sale confirmed at the new price was 20,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment to an outport refiner.

Refined was unchanged at 4.40c for fine granulated. The steadier raw market had no influence apparently, with buyers still limiting purchases to nearby requirements only.

LONE STAR GAS AND MESTA HIGHER

Fuel Leader Has Sharp Rally, While Earnings Put Machine Stock Up

Stocks made substantial progress on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, led by Lone Star Gas and Mesta Machine. Strong buying of Lone Star developed during the late morning and forced the price up a full point from the opening. Mesta's advance was due mainly to the glowing report for 1930, showing net of $4.02 a share as against $2.81 in 1929.

Demand for Mesta was evident at the opening and by midday the stock was in new high ground for the year. In addition to the stimulus of last year's earnings the stock was helped by the company's statement that current outlook is favorable. The company carried unfilled orders of $7,150,000 into 1931, an expansion of $1,500,000 over the backlog at the beginning of the previous year.

Pittsburgh Forgings, another favorite in recent trading, slipped slightly at the start of the market but retrieved its early loss later. The general list remained quiet but generally steady.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 10.—Cotton opened steady today, 2 to 4 points lower. Offerings were absorbed around 11c for May and 11.53c for October. The market showed net losses of about 5 points at the end of the first half hour.

The demand which developed at the 11-cent level for May proved sufficient to sustain the market later in the morning. At midday May was selling at 11.01c and October at 11.55c, or about 3 to 4 points net higher.

CHAIN STORE SALES

Jewel Tea Company reported sales for the four weeks ending February 21 were $1,107,352.53, as compared with $1,206,490.16 for the same weeks in 1930, or a decrease of 8.22 per cent. Sales for the first eight weeks of this year were $2,174,265.58, compared with $2,409,003.42 for a like period in 1930, a decrease of 9.74 per cent.

Childs Company February sales were $1,889,203, a decline of $259,099 from a year ago. Two months' sales totaled $3,972,476, off $544,444 from the 1930 period.

STOCK EXCHANGE TOPICS

Chicago and Northwestern February Income to Show Drop.

Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad, said gross revenues and net operating income for February will be below the corresponding month of 1930, but that the decline in net operating income will not be proportionately as large as the drop in gross. While the lakes will open to navigation earlier than usual this year, it probably will not have an appreciable effect on traffic movements. There is not likely to be as much iron ore moving in the coming season as was the case last year, according to Mr. Sargent.

Standard statistics assumes a decidedly bearish position toward the common stocks of rubber companies, after a lengthy survey of the industry. It points out that sales of automobile tires this year are expected to expand only moderately above the drastically reduced levels of 1930. Original equipment business for the year is estimated at around 15,000,000 units, replacements at 42,000,000 and exports at 2,500,000, raising the probable total to 59,500,000, against distributions of some 54,000,000 casings last year and 71,000,000 in 1929.

While admitting that no absolute forecast of 1931 profits can be given in an industry wherein price levels are so generally governed by competitive prices, or where total returns are dependent to a major extent on fluctuations in raw material values, the survey concludes that on the basis of present prospects, earnings for the first half of 1931 are unlikely to equal those of the corresponding 1930 period. It further holds that because of the current high level of common share quotations in relation to recent and prospective near-term income showings, present holdings of common shares should be liquidated.

Wall street is greatly perplexed by the persistent nature of the selling which has been evident in Warner Brothers over the last fortnight or so. Only recently, when the stock was ruling around the high levels of the year, there was much discussion of the impending entry of new interests into the affairs of the company. Now the story is that considerable selling has come from sources which were active on the buying side months ago. The financial community is disposed to be a trifle worrisome, not so much because of the weakness in the stock, but because this weakness is accompanied by persistent selling also in the 6 per cent convertible debentures.

The market showed itself in a waiting mood throughout yesterday, apparently determined to mark time until two important nearby developments are out of the way. One of these is the steel corporation's monthly report showing the volume of unfilled orders on its books which will be available at noon today. This compilation is expected generally to show some measure of reduction, such calculations being based on the belief that mill shipments last month ran ahead of new business received. The second of these events is the New York Central meeting tomorrow to act on the quarterly dividend due at this time. On the basis of last year's earnings and indicated operating performance thus far this year, it would be logical to expect a revision in the rate of payments, but feeling is strong that the regular quarterly disbursement of $2 will be ordered.

Active speculation for the rise appeared to center chiefly in the motor stocks yesterday under the leadership of General Motors, Chrysler, Nash and Auburn. All these stocks showed considerable activity and General Motors and Chrysler pushed forward to new high levels for the year. The tendency toward expansion of operations in the industry is the real force back of the growing popularity of the motor stocks, but thus far the buying has been principally professional in character. Output of leading companies last week reached 58,750 units, about 4,730 more than the week before, but naturally far under the same weeks in 1930 and 1929.

WHEN YOU GET INDIGESTION

Here Is Safe, Speedy Relief

If you [illegible] have gas, flatulence, uncomfortable "fullness" after meals, or [illegible] stomach burns after eating, don't [illegible] wait for the discomfort to pass off. Digestive trouble is nearly always due to excess acid in the stomach which interrupts digestion, ferments food, attacks the stomach lining and may in time be followed by dangerous stomach ulcers. You can avoid this danger and promptly relieve discomfort by taking a little "Bisurated" Magnesia—either powder or tablets—after meals or whenever pain is felt. Excess acid is instantly neutralized, fermentation stops, gas is dispersed, pain disappears and the sore, inflamed stomach lining is soothed and strengthened. Indigestion, however mild, should never be ignored and sufferers should follow the practice of thousands all over the world by getting a sealed package of "Bisurated" Magnesia from May-Liggett Drug Stores or the nearest drug store. Its use means complete stomach ease and freedom from acid indigestion.

Mary Lou Changes Mind About Going Away

CHAPTER XXII.

After she had written the note, sealed and addressed it, Mary Lou sat quite still at the desk until her hands and feet grew ice cold and turning out the light she shivered and groped her way back to bed. Once there she lay awake again for, it seemed to her, a very long time. She clasped her hands in the darkness and miserably, after the way of youth, wished herself dead.

The letter was in the desk drawer. She would wait for an opportunity, when, say, Mrs. Lorrimer would be in New York and Lorrimer perhaps busy about the place, then she would put the note in Mrs. Lorrimer's room and slip away, escape somehow from the knowledge of a love which could never come to anything, a love founded, in a sense, upon a lie.

But the next morning dawned sunny and clear and cold. There was a firm coating of ice on the little lake and at breakfast Lorrimer cheerfully announced that skating was indicated. He had dragged out his old rusty skates from a closet and had had them sharpened and shined and had ordered a pair for Mary Lou some weeks before. So, after breakfast, well wrapped against the cold, they went down together to the little lake and Lorrimer knelt down to put on her skates for her. She looked down at his bent, dark head and wondered how she could ever leave him. Just to stay near him, somehow, seemed suddenly enough . . . but—she couldn't stay.

Burns Letter

He looked up then and found her eyes on him, intent and mysterious and sorrowful. He said, holding her slim ankle in the clasp of his bare hand:

"Don't be angry with me for last night, Delight. I couldn't help it. I—well, blame it on the Christmas spirit. I can't tell you how I dread your anger, your miscomprehension. You mean so much to me, you have been so much to me, so patient and understanding. If ever I get to be a useful citizen of this world again, I—I'll owe it to you. Do you forgive me?"

She said "Of course." Her heart was beating like a trip hammer. Lorrimer pulled her to her feet, put on his mittens and his cap, and took her hands in his. Out they spun upon the gleaming surface of the lake, hand in hand, laughing like children, circling slowly, then faster, the blood running warmly through their veins, their cheeks whipped to fine color, their eyes clear and shining.

"Once I could waltz," he told her, and put his arms about her. Whistling, he danced her, muffled and laughing, about the lake. Then one foot slipped, he made a wild grasp to recover his balance and they both fell ignominiously.

"Golly, are you hurt?" he demanded and ruefully arose to help her to her feet.

"Only my pride," she told him. "Suppose we don't try anything quite as fancy as that for a while."

They skated up to the bank and back again, in long, graceful sweeping steps. It was nearly lunch time before they returned to the house. On the way up, their skates slung over his arm, he said:

"We have—such good times. I—I haven't lived for so long. If you knew what laughter meant to me, Delight—"

She thought she did know. After all, his happiness came first. As long as he was happy, what right had she to run away?

Going to her room to get ready for luncheon she went to the desk, took out the letter and weighed it in her hand. After a moment she walked resolutely to the fireplace, dropped it in, bent to set a match to it and watched it burn.

Love Requited

No, she owed it to him to stay. And she owed it to Mrs. Lorrimer and so, calling upon herself for some unexpected depth of courage, Mary Lou went forward into the New Year.

And this was the knowledge that Mary Lou took into the New Year with her the explicit understanding of her love for Travers Lorrimer. She had faced it with, at first, a blind, black panic which urged her to escape, to run away to the very ends of the earth. But that she could not do; she had committed herself to stay on until such time as her employer—for after all, Margaret Lorrimer was just that, a miraculously kind, a beloved and admired employer, but still—an employer—should discharge her from her curious, but, nevertheless, definite duties.

Mary Lou, in her voracious reading, had often read of "love unrequited." She thought, now, that she could have borne that with some measure of fortitude. Loving never hurt anyone, really, she told herself, and she could have faced with a certain gallantry Lorrimer's unadorned liking or, even his complete indifference. But her love was not unrequited, for Lorrimer told her that he loved her a hundred times a day, by a word, a gesture, a deep, long look from the brown eyes which were beginning to look out on life again with a normal interest and curiosity.

That was the hardest thing to bear; that he loved . . . not her but her masquerade; not Mary Lou Thurston, but the girl he thought she was, an unknown girl named Delight Harford who might or might not, at the present moment, exist; loved, not even Delight herself but his memory of her, incarnate in Mary Lou's own person, translated into flesh and blood—at $300 a month, in love, in short, with a living girl who had taken upon herself a role, who daily practiced a deception.

It was worse than difficult, it was almost unendurable. For Mary Lou, in her new gained and bitter wisdom, realized that for the price of a look or a word, at the least lifting of her hand, she could be in his arms, she could hear the broken words of love, she could know, again, the soaring ecstasy of his embrace.

Difference Noted

What it would come to, if she surrendered to this daily increasing temptation, she did not know. To—marriage? But he was already married to Delight, or so he said. And if she snatched at rapture, secretly, lived for a little while in a paradise of fools and dreamers, it would all come to an end, sooner or later. For that, once learning that she loved him, he would become importunate, she knew. And so the deception could not go on, she would have to tell him the truth. Margaret would have to know. And it was not part of her bargain with Mrs. Lorrimer that Mary Lou should fall in love—with Delight Harford's husband.

So she spoke no word and made no gesture. She schooled herself to an even, rather chilling friendliness toward Lorrimer. She concentrated all her efforts on his physical and mental welfare and gave his heart cold comfort.

Mrs. Lorrimer, always quick on the uptake, noticed something—something so slight that it was hard to formulate into words, or, even, into thoughts.

Mary Lou sat the desk.

But there seemed a certain lack of spontaneity in Mary Lou's attitude toward Lorrimer, she seemed vigilant, always a little on her guard. Puzzled, Margaret spoke to Doctor Mathews about it, one day.

Thinks Only of Son

"She's different," Margaret said. "I can't explain—even with me, she's altered. Oh, so slightly there's no name for it."

"It's possible, isn't it, that she's fallen in love with him?" asked Mathews, almost casually.

"I've hoped she would," she announced, shamelessly.

Mathews laughed and then sobered to deep gravity.

"Oh, women!" he began . . . "Margaret, of course, I know why you'd wish that, but can't you see how it would complicate things? In the first place, Travers will have to know the truth sooner or later. I have been hoping he'd stumble on it himself. Perhaps he will. The shock will be very severe. He may turn against Mary Lou, may react against her in anger and indignation. We thought of that before, you know. But as long as she didn't care for him it didn't matter very much. If she does care for him, as I believe and as you hope, it will be very hard for her. We have to think of her, you see."

Mrs. Lorrimer raised steady brown eyes to her friend's.

"I love Mary Lou," she admitted simply. "I wouldn't ask for a dearer daughter. But, of course, I haven't thought of her. I've thought of Travers. I'm always thinking of him. His happiness. I'd sacrifice anyone and anything for him. You know that. Where Travers is concerned, I'm an utterly unscrupulous woman, Dan."

"You're a mother," he answered, and sighed. He loved her very much. He'd loved her for years. But there hadn't been a chance for him. She'd been intensely in love with her husband and after his death all that passion of tenderness had been transferred to the boy, a passion which had deepened and a tenderness which had increased since disaster had come upon her son.

This the doctor knew. And contented himself as best he could with her confidence and unfaltering friendship.

Tangled Web

That she was fond of him he was also aware. And was perfectly convinced, as well, that her affection for Mary Lou was sincerity itself. But he knew, and she knew, that she would throw them both overboard without much more than a passing qualm if it would help Travers to regain happiness.

He sighed, a little dispiritedly.

"'Oh, what a tangled web we weave,'" he began, half humorously, half gravely.

"Don't say it!" she interrupted. "You're not usually so trite, Dan. It will all straighten out, I am convinced of it. And Travers is basically too sane to harbor a grudge against us long. The situation wasn't of our making, originally. Mary Lou came here, quite innocently, through the error of a newspaper advertisement. And Travers saw her. And what were we to do when he mistook her for someone else? I think he'll realize all that and also what she's done for him, when the time comes for him to know the truth."

"We," Mathews reminded her, "do not know the truth ourselves. Until this other girl is found we won't know it. Even if we succeed in tracing the records of the alleged marriage, we won't know it until we learn beyond a shadow of a doubt that she is dead—or alive."

Mrs. Lorrimer had risen and was standing at the library window. It was almost tea hour and the slanting light of the sun shone in, as she pushed aside the draperies and looked out, and touched her white hair with a finger of pure, pale gold.

"They should be in soon," she murmured.

DAILY TRUE STORY— The Sap

Who is it, Molly?'' Dan asked. He was rather busy this morning with some construction estimates.

''J. Hemingway Sargent,'' Molly said, reading from the card.

The devil you say!" Dan yelled.

Molly laughed.

"He looks more like a minister, Dan. He was awful surprised when he found I was working for you."

"Did you tell him we were going to be married right away?"

"No, Dan, do see him, don't make a scene, forget the old quarrel, please, there's a dear."

J. Hemingway Sargent was a cousin to Dan. He had been reared and educated in this same city. He had always held himself superior to Dan, from boyhood. One reason was because his people had money and Dan's people had none. Again J. Hemingway was a born reformer. He did not approve of Dan because in the good old days Dan used to take a drink now and then, he liked to play a little poker, he went to burlesque shows quite often and skylarked around with a jolly crowd.

Cousin Shocked

J. Hemingway Sargent had turned to reform as a duck goes to water. He had a glib tongue and when the prohibition movement came up J. Hemingway was in the thick of it. He drew down a rather fat salary from a certain organization because of his cleverness at lobbying. He had been in Washington working for these same prohibition boosters ever since.

Dan got up as J. Hemingway strutted in.

"You know I never use that name, Dan," he said, "it isn't dignified."

"Hell, it was your father's name—"

"Same hopeless old Dan, profane as usual."

J. Hemingway sat down and glanced about the office.

"How are you making out?"

"Eating and drinking regularly, Jake—excuse me, J. Hemingway," Dan answered, grinning at him.

"Ah, but you are not drinking any more, thank God."

"If God had been responsible for prohibition there would be no need of paying you lobbyists, he would have made it a success."

J. Hemingway glared at him and shook his head.

"You are sacrilegious, Dan, and insulting. I am an adviser to certain people interested in maintaining prohibition and I object to the term 'lobbyist.'"

"Don't blame you, I'd hate like hell to be one, myself."

"So you are getting along all right?" J. Hemingway said hastily, to change the subject.

"Not starving. I've built a score of big blocks in the past 10 years and several of them I own free and clear. By the way, were you surprised to see Molly working here?"

"Surprised and pained."

Bet Accepted

"I came on solely to see Molly. I trust that I can take her out of this grind now."

"When she was a kid of 18 you proposed and then got snooty and threw her down Think she'll marry you now?"

"That goes without saying, Dan."

Dan laughed and made no comments. Evidently J. Hemingway had not noticed the big solitaire on Molly's finger.

"Im glad you have prospered, Dan, and I feel a great pride in it myself. I had a great share in bringing prohibition about, as you know, and with prohibition I flatter myself that you were saved in spite of yourself?"

"Saved from what?"

"A drunkard's grave. Oh, I know, many's the time when you were young you got tipsy."

"Good old days," Dan said, laughing.

"Wicked old days and gone forever. I suppose you still sit around and bemoan the loss of the saloons and the free lunches and the beer and the insidious cocktails."

J. Hemingway laughed tolerantly.

Well, I hadn't noticed the departure of the good old days, J. Hemingway. We manage to get our beer and our insidious cocktails. Fact is, the old town never was so wet as it is right now."

"That," said J. Hemingway, "is a lie. It is used by all of you disgrunted ones to hurt the cause, but it won't work. We know that we have killed the saloon, we have saved you fools from the demon rum, we have—"

"Aw, let up, for Pete's sake, don't waste any silver-tongued oratory on me. The city is wetter than it ever was, there is wetter bars here and there are a thousand new places to get booze where none existed before that great American joke, Prohibition, came along."

"Dan, it is useless to lie to me. Some may believe it but we know better. There isn't a saloon in the city, so far as I could observe Some few desirables may get a little now and then—"

"So the good old days are gone forever, eh? I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll bet you a nice wedding present for Molly, a nice one, say five thousand cash, and I'll let you be the judge, that there's more booze here now and more places to get it aside from bars, and more bars, than ever there was before the Eighteenth amendment came along, minus enforcement."

"Five thousand—as a wedding present for Molly?"

"Exactly."

"Well, you've gone crazy, in the first place you will lose and in the second place, even if I could lose, the money will go to Molly and as I told you I came on to marry her."

"All right, if I'm a sap, I'm a sap. Come along with me."

They went out together. J. Hemingway paused to say to Molly, "My dear, I'm coming over to see you tonight, do you still live on Willow street?"

"Oh, yes," Molly said and stopped there for Dan had winked at her.

For hours Dan took J. Hemingway around. He showed him where he could get liquor in a hat shop, a delicatessen, a hand laundry, a dry cleaners and a barber shop.

Dan Wins Wager

"Got a few," the man answered, handing back two dollars and what looked like a roll of papers.

They went down an alley and Dan produced a bottle of gin from the papers.

"Well, you're the judge—do I win?"

"I—well—yes, I suppose so."

"Then when you go over to thrill Molly with the information that you are going to marry her, give her $5,000, will you, and explain about it?"

"Yes."

"Good."

They parted.

That evening J. Hemingway Sargent called on Molly. Dan was there.

"I just dropped in to see that she got the $5,000 for a wedding present," Dan said, "give it to her and I'll be running along."

J. Hemingway gave her a check.

"I'll be going," Dan said, "and by the way, I didn't mention, did I, that Molly and I are getting married next week."

"What?"

"Yes," Molly said.

"Thanks for the wedding present, J. Hemingway, it will come in handy," said Dan, "you see—"

But J. Hemingway was making for the door.

"Don't forget the good old days, J. Hemingway," Dan shouted.

There was no answer, only a terrific slam of the front door.

Watch the Legislature

Many Revolutionary Proposals Are Under Consideration at Harrisburg.

Interest in the Department of Supplies scandal, the investigation of the public utilities and other matters prominently before the public should not be permitted to divert the citizens' attention from the legislation under consideration at Harrisburg. A number of bills have been introduced which are revolutionary in their scope. Some of them are bad, yet may be "sneaked through" if the people are not on guard; others are good, but may fail of passage if the public shows no interest in them.

The "special interests" of every sort are alert. They have their representatives at Harrisburg who promptly inform them when a measure is introduced that may even indirectly affect their business; they watch the progress of the bill carefully, receive frequent reports as to its status and prospects, and take appropriate steps to oppose or facilitate its passage.

The proposed election code is as important as anything before the Legislature. Friends of good government must not overlook it in selecting the measures that especially call for their solicitious attention.

The Moore bill, authorizing the people of Pittsburgh to adopt the city manager form of government if they choose, also is of first importance.

Among the dangerous proposals—dangerous for the people, that is—are the Sterling bill abolishing the direct primary in favor of the old convention system of nominating public officers, and the Rooney bill which would put Pittsburgh's board of public education back in politics.

A hearing is scheduled for today on Representative Musmanno's bill for the abolition of the coal and iron police. It is perhaps the best of the various plans that have been offered to free Pennsylvania from the evil system that was responsible for the killing of John Borkowski and has been responsible for many other cases of brutality and oppression.

Among the proposals for the abolition of the coal and iron police are some containing "jokers" that would really perpetuate the system. It will not do, therefore, for the public to assume that the battle is as good as won. There are powerful interests in Pennsylvania who, while not openly working to save the coal and iron police system, are undoubtedly doing everything they can to circumvent the bills abolishing it.

It is gratifying to find a local delegation being organized at last to attend the hearing, set for next Tuesday, on the Musmanno Home Rule Sunday bill. Philadelphia has been preparing for some time to let the Legislature know that it sees no harm in Sunday concerts, Sunday baseball games, Sunday movies or any other form of entertainment that is lawful on other days, and that it desires the Blue Law of 1794 changed to permit them in municipalities whose people vote in favor of such a change.

The people of Allegheny County are five to one against the Blue Law, but it looked for a while as if this community would not be adequately represented at the hearing. Assurance is now given that a number of organizations will send delegations, but it is uncertain if the City Council, which favors liberalization of the law, will be represented. It is to be hoped Council will arrange to send a committee.

A delegation of Pittsburghers is arranging to visit Harrisburg in behalf of two measures introduced by Senator Frank J. Harris. One provides for mental examinations of persons accused of homicide or, if they have criminal records, of any felony; the other requires an investigation by a probation officer of the history of every person charged with a crime calling for a minimum of six months imprisonment.

These bills have the indorsement of the foremost social service and penal authorities and undoubtedly would make it possible to deal with criminals more intelligently than is now possible.

There are hundreds of other bills before the Legislature which it behooves the people to watch. Great possibilities for good and evil lurk in them.

Little Minds

The saying is recalled by the action of City Council yesterday in "standing pat" on its refusal to investigate the "irregularities" in the Department of Supplies.

Council has been, from time immemorial, the body to which the citizens looked for investigation of irregularities in the executive department. The councilmen composing the "mayor's majority" do not lack brains; they are aware that they have been recreant to their duty; and some of them no doubt would have been glad to restore themselves to the confidence of the public by reversing their original position and calling for an inquiry—if they could have "saved their faces."

Unfortunately, their minds proved to be little; they were terrified by the hobgoblin of consistency; and so they continued in their indefensible position. Their brave talk of "standing fearless" deceived nobody.

It had been hoped there would prove to be some big minds in the mayor's majority who would not be afraid of being inconsistent but would have the courage to admit they had been wrong in opposing the inquiry and the manhood to change their course. Vain hope!

It Is Working Smoothly

Stations at which the unemployed may register as applicants for work were opened at a number of points in the county yesterday and hundreds of men took the step which will again place them on a payroll.

In the meanwhile additional contributions of funds, equivalent to the amount paid out for a day of the payroll in 1929, have come from many great corporations.

The plan is working smoothly. Nothing has come up, nor is there anything in sight, to interfere with the attainment of the objective—the ending of unemployment in Allegheny County.

Depression is being conquered without resort to the dole, which is as it should be.

'Beware of Pickpockets!'

The veteran when unemployed
Knows what it means to be in need—
Will find that glowing promise false
And he had better run than read.

That rainbow scheme is just the bait,
As everyone should understand,
That hard won bonus is the prey
Of itching palm and clutching hand.

Isn't It So?

The preacher is the man with the greatest task on earth and the most urgent.

How Architecture Will Unite Science, Art

By Archibald Henderson

It is now coming to be recognized that art and science have much in common. Max Eastman, who has written philosophically about art, wit and humor, recently said, "Science is merely the skilled use of the mind and the stores of human knowledge about any problem."

This might almost be taken as a definition of art, as well. Bertrand Russell once gave a definition of mathematics. But soon afterwards Daniel Gregory Mason, a professor of music at Columbia University, said that the definition would hold good as a definition of music, by simply substituting the word "music" for the word "mathematics" everywhere the latter occurred. Here is the definition; try it and see:

The characteristic excellence of mathematics is only to be found where the reasoning is strictly logical; the rules of logic are to mathematics what those of structure are to architecture. In the most beautiful work, a chain of argument is presented in which every link is important on its own account, in which there is an air of ease and lucidity throughout, and the premises achieve more than would have been thought possible, by means which appear natural and inevitable. Literature embodies what is general in particular circumstances whose universal significance shines through their individual dress; but mathematics endeavors to present whatever is most general in its purity, without any irrelevant trappings.

Especial attention should be called to the statement in the above definition: the rules of logic are to mathematics what those of structure are to architecture. It will thus be seen that architecture is that realm where art and science appear to merge completely. You have heard of the Western millionaire who, enriched suddenly overnight, hired a contractor to build him a house, and afterwards hired an architect to "put on the architecture."

Any structure, with pretensions to both beauty and stability, is the creation alike of art and architecture. But beauty is not decorative merely—something applied to the building after it has been set up. Beauty is and must be an initial, integral part of the structure—built into it with the original plan and apparent in its completion. It is too late, after the building is already erected, to apply beauty, art, architecture to the outside; it is too late for that then! We have all seen examples of such monstrosities—with gingerbread ornamentation and fancy scrollwork. Many a building, instead of being a "dream in marble," is only a nightmare in wood.

True architecture, an architecture with permanent qualities of greatness, must express the genius of a people, a sense of its organic life and esthetic spirit. It is useless for the engineer to make a building characterized by efficiency and economy; and then have the designer decorate it with an architectural frosting like that of an ornate birthday cake. Structural and esthetic unity must go together. Art and science must unite in the creation of architecture of universal value.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

"What can I believe?" she says. I want to know the truth about life, but where can I find it? I read a dozen books. Each writer says something different. They contradict each other. Which one is right — which one shall I believe?"

What can you believe?

BELIEVE WHAT YOU CAN USE.

BELIEVE THAT WHICH SEEMS TO BELONG TO YOU.

You are not like anyone else on earth. You have different needs, different understandings—

You are not even like your own Self—that Self which you were at 16, or last year, or even yesterday. You have reached a certain stage of development, peculiar to you and your needs today. You alone know what those needs are and you alone can judge what will supply those needs. The facts that will supply another's needs will not supply yours.

THE THING WHICH IS TRUTH FOR ANOTHER MAN IS NOT TRUTH FOR YOU.

THAT IS WHY HIS TRUTH WILL NEVER DO YOU ANY GOOD — AND WHY YOUR TRUTH WON'T DO HIM ANY GOOD. (It is easy to accept that first fact. It is very hard to accept the second!)

Seek the thing which will fit your present need—your present understanding.

How will you know it when you find it?

You will know it as you know your own coat, your own home. It will fit you. It will do something for you. It will make it easier for you to be brave kind and eager.

Seek the words that fit you.

Never mind if they are simple words — so simple that other people laugh at them. If they fit you and help you, that's enough. Then those words are The Truth for you today.

A NURSERY RHYME, WHICH YOU MUST ACCEPT AND MAKE PART OF YOUR ACTUAL EXPERIENCE, IS BETTER FOR YOU THAN TOMES OF THE FLOSSIEST PHILOSOPHY WHICH YOU QUOTE BUT DO NOT ASSIMILATE.

Take the Truth you can use, wherever you find it. But do not hold on to any Truth too long. Do not try to find a Truth that will last you through your life. Do not feel that you must believe a thing today because you believed it last year . . or fear to change your ideas and standards lest you seem inconsistent.

BE INCONSISTENT!

Keep on changing! Keep on growing! Keep on demanding new and larger Truths.

For, remember this—THERE IS NO ONE, FIXED, ULTIMATE STANDARD OF TRUTH.

Truth is like Life—endlessly proceeding — endlessly unfolding. And he who would follow the Truth, embarks upon a very uncomfortable, often a very dangerous adventure.

TRUTH WILL CERTAINLY RAISE CAIN WITH YOUR STATUS QUO.

Believe that which you can use. Believe that which fits your needs—today. Use that Truth until you can find a bigger one. And so go on. BUT BE PREPARED TO TAKE THE CONSEQUENCES.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

My Island

My life is a little island
Set within the sea,
Boundless and sunlit,
Of God's immensity.

My island may be barren
Save for its palm-tree tall,
But the sea sends dear voices
To whisper through them all.

My island may be far off
The charted ocean lanes,
Yet it is bright with sunlight
And sweet with sea's refrains.

And never, never lonely
My little island lies,
For murmuring on every shore
God's endless songs arise!

No Spellbinder

She Talks FACTS.

HON. MARY T. NORTON.

The woman pictured above looks pleasant and capable, and is even more pleasant and capable than she looks.

We trust you read her speech on prohibition at the Democratic National Committee meeting in Washington. It was the best one made.

Mrs. Norton said:

"The thing we want to do is to win an election. We are going to win in 1932, and the women of the party will be the strongest factor.

"No class of people knows better than women what prohibition has done to the children of this country. We know that morality has decreased. As a woman, I know women want a change. That is the sentiment of every decent woman I have come in contact with."

Mrs. Norton made a few more pertinent remarks and sat down. No "spell-binding," merely a plain statement of fact, backed up by the determination to end the abuses that prohibition has brought upon the land.

Women were largely responsible for prohibition. After seeing how prohibition works—or, rather, doesn't work—they will be largely responsible for getting rid of prohibition.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 10.—The most fleeting of all popularity in the amusement world is that of the radio artist. No one knows just why. Time after time skilled performers have reached a high pinnacle of success and, like a candle light in a sudden breeze, vanished.

The radio's audience, more than any other, demands change. They hear but rarely see the broadcasts, and thus the intangible lure of ofttimes vivid personalties is denied. Too, artists are not able to feel the spark of spontaneity that comes with face-to-face contact.

So far few radio stars have maintained top furore for more than a year. Often it is only six months, and they begin slowly to slip. In some instances personal appearances prolonged interest; but generally speaking, stage and screen efforts have been disappointing.

They lack the quality called "a box office draw." Talking machine recording artists who appear in person are far more valuable in boosting receipts. Experts believe that when the business is better stabilized the radio guild's professional life will be more durable.

During their brief ascendancy, the enthusiasm is cyclonic. Radio stars receive more voluminous mail than their brothers and sisters of the movies and legit. But the glamour is not so satisfying. Talking into a microphone in a lonely room cramps the imagination.

They have no way of knowing how many listen in. There is no applause and they must wait several days before receiving praise. Their names do not blaze in electric lights and not a handful of curiosity seekers watch for them at studio doors.

Vanity is not appeased by recognition in public. A stage star has 10 and often 20 fruitful years. The cinema star will hold audiences for five years and longer. But the radio star cannot hope for more than two years as things are today.

The radiant Helen Morgan is the most highly sensitized actress on the stage. She is a bundle of nerves. Her graceful hands with such remarkable tapering fingers are constantly aflutter, like dry leaves in a sudden breeze, in the spotlight. That is why she indulges those odd gyrations such as twisting a finger on the piano lid while singing. Often she locks herself in a dressing room until the call boy's knock to get hold of herself. Yet strangely enough her perpetual fright is rarely noticeable to audiences.

* * *

Phil Baker's apparent self assurance and masterful poise have made him one of the foremost comedians of his time. Yet Baker's insouciance is more often than not feigned. At almost every performance he suffers the torment of stage fright. Indeed, it seems all good troupers do.

Popular music has suddenly gone Cuban. The two big song successes of the season are "The Peanut Vendor" and "Lady, Play Your Mandolin," both by Cuban composers. And slow rhythm so dancers can walk leisurely is all the go in the smart places.

* * *

A gentleman has just tried to interest me in a volume to be called: "Who's who In Newspaperdom." For $20 my name along with high lights of my mandolin career and other astonishing achievements will be included. "But if I don't pay the $20?" I asked. His reply, inspiring a startled blink, was: "Things will go on as usual."

Warning to desk peekers! On the desk of an office this afternoon was a curious box inlaid with pearls. I lifted the lid. It was a cigaret container and a hidden music dingus began to tinkle just as the owner came breezing in.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You may have met with success.

What is it doing to you; encouraging you to greater effort or making you self-satisfied, conceited and arrogant?

What is success to you may mean no more than an advancement in position which has been filled satisfactorily by many predecessors.

Is your promotion then to be considered of so much importance?

Does not the fact that it has brought about a change in your attitude toward others prove that you really are small and easily satisfied, rather than competent?

To be an arrogant boss just because you have been given greater authority is pretty sure proof that you won't get much farther.

You can't convince your former department associates that they are so much inferior to you.

You displaced a man when you were put in the new job and another man may displace you, but do not be too sure that you will be the one selected to go to the top.
